

them. This was the meeting place agreed upon. Telegraph to Cape Henlopen and see if they are there.

COMMODORE REGALADO.

Up to 9 P. M. to-night nothing has been heard from the fleet, and whether they have been attacked by Cuban cruisers or have been lost by bad weather it is hard to say. Every effort on the part of the Consul has failed to discover the whereabouts of the fleet, and at present serious apprehensions as to their welfare are felt in Norfolk.

Fighting Near Puerto Principe—Insurgents Surrendering.

HAVANA, Jan. 11.—Numerous engagements between the Government troops and the insurgents are reported to have taken place near Puerto Principe and in the Cinco Villas district. The journals report that many of the insurgents are surrendering.

The Spanish Gunboats—Anxiety for Their Safety.

RICHMOND, Va., Jan. 11.—The following dispatch, received by the Spanish Consul in Norfolk yesterday, shows that the greatest anxiety is felt in regard to the safety of the last squadron of the Spanish mosquito fleet:

FORTRESS MONROE, Jan 10, 1870.

To Duncan Robinson, Spanish Consul:

The Spanish steamship Isabel Catolica arrived here at 11 o'clock this morning, and reports that at 1 o'clock P. M. on the 9th the gunboats, thirteen of which she was convoying, were in sight. No. 22 asked for assistance at some distance from the rest, and in going to her we lost sight of the others and know nothing about
