

CUBA.

A Fight Near Puerto Principe—The Cubans Repulsed—Capture of the Rest of Lono's Party—The Colonel Killed after a Desperate Hand-to-Hand Fight.

HAVANA, July 4.—The rebel leader, BEMBETA, entered the Puerto Principe jurisdiction again on the 27th ult. The loyal guerrillas started in pursuit, and, led to his camp by a rebel prisoner, a sharp fight ensued, lasting an hour and a half. BEMBETA, after reforming his line three times, was finally routed. Sixteen Spaniards and forty-six Cubans were killed. BEMBETA'S force numbered six hundred. The commanding officer in the Hólguin District reports that he has captured the seven remaining men of the second George B. Upton expedition, and that they are now in jail at Holguin. He also states that the rebel Colonel, LONO, who commanded the filibusters, was killed by a corporal and two soldiers, after a desperate resistance, during which the corporal was badly wounded. Owing to the heavy arrivals of corn at Havana, the market is flooded, and prices have declined. Freights to the United States are buoyant—per box of sugar, $1 25.