

QUESADA'S MANIFESTO.—General Manuel Quesada, Commander-in-Chief of the republican army of the island of Cuba, who arrived in this country about ten days ago, has delivered an address to the people of the United States, which will be found on another page. The General speaks hopefully of the future and boldly avows that the Cubans fighting in Cuba have resolved that their country shall soon be a free and independent nation. A tabular statement of the strength of the liberating army is contained in the General's manifesto, and it no doubt will afford food for reflection by those who seem to believe that the Cuban rebellion amounts to nothing. Not only have the Cubans an organized army, but they have also, according to General Quesada, in the district occupied by their troops, churches, schools and manufactories for the supplying of war material. The manifesto is a calm, candid and earnest document.
