HAVANA, April 27, 1870.

The Captain General telegraphs the following news:—

The troops at Najasa killed thirty insurgents, including two Americans. A detachment at Caura destroyed a powder mill, killed seven insurgents and captured Prefect Betancourt. The column under Bourrich has brought in 130 prisoners. A rebel detachment from Cuevas has surrendered with a wagon train and stores. The rebels are thoroughly disorganized, and wandering about in scattered bands, without leaders. The latter are roaming along the coasts, seeking to escape from the island. The rebel General Agramante has thrown up his command.

A young man named Castellanas presented a forged check at the Spanish Bank to-day. The fraud was discovered, and the forger, while attempting to escape, shot at Señor Rizo, vice president of the bank, but missed, the bullet entering the roof. He is now in custody.
