How the Fourth of July was Celebrated.

HAVANA, July 5, 1870.

The Americans here celebrated the Fourth of July by a dinner, at which, for the first time since the late rebellion, Northern and Southern men met in this city on a convivial occasion. The band of the volunteers furnished the music. Speeches were made by the Consul General and others, and great good feeling prevailed. The rooms were decorated with American flags, and in front of the building hung the Spanish and American banners.
