Havana, Cuba—Possibly the most articulate Havana in recent months is radio commentator Fulgencio Pardo. Every evening, he makes a two-minute radio commentary with the shrill, hysterical voice is the hallmark of the Castro revolution, and indirectly it means government support.

The bullets missed his body, however, as he drove to stay in the United States.

During the Batista regime (1952 to 1958) Pardo was exiled to Argentina. In 1958, on return to Cuba, he was arrested and imprisoned for 42 days by Batista. His career in the mid-1950s was not so rosy. He was accused of an unknown crime and sentenced to 20 years in prison.

Pardo's career began in 1945 when he was appointed assistant to President Carlos Mendieta. He was dismissed in 1946 on charges of political corruption.

In 1958 Pardo was released from prison and returned to Cuba. He was appointed to the cabinet of Prime Minister Fulgencio Batista.

During his exile in Argentina, Pardo was associated with the Batista regime and was accused of being a supporter of the regime. He was arrested and imprisoned for 42 days by Batista.

The two apparently parted ways during the Batista regime. Pardo remained loyal to Batista and was appointed to the cabinet of Prime Minister Fulgencio Batista.

During his exile in Argentina, Pardo was associated with the Batista regime and was accused of being a supporter of the regime. He was arrested and imprisoned for 42 days by Batista.