TO THE AMERICAN BUSINESS MAN, in recognition of his progressive spirit, love of fair play, and indefatigable energy, I respectfully dedicate this volume.

Samuel B. Eastman

Preface.

Undoubtedly the reader is familiar with the fact that there exists a surprisingly large number of books on the subject of foreign trade which devote three-fourths of their space to useless generalities and the giving of advice on the subject, of such a character as the business man, who uses sound judgment, does not need, and which, for anyone not gifted with common sense, is useless.

Time and again the author has seen books on the subject, of 500 to 800 pages, which give no more of basic, fundamental, necessary information than could have been rendered in one-third of the same space.

Realizing the importance of saving to the business man time and brain-power by not wasting his time and energy by a lot of useless data and generalities, the author has prepared the present volume on Cuba, its trade and how to cater to and secure it, with the aim in view "not of how much (useless) information the book furnishes", but rather, "how much (useless) information is cut out". It is unnecessary to dwell upon the importance of Cuban trade, and upon the many factors favoring the conquest of that trade by the United States. These facts are too well known to the progressive business man to be worthy of repetition.

Neither is it necessary to point out special ways and means of how to get the trade. The principles of salesmanship are, after all, the same the wide world over, and it is ridiculous and an insult to the reader's intelligence for anyone to attempt to lay down hard and fast rules, and point out never-failing ways and means of successfully carrying on a sales campaign in a particular line, in Cuba, or any other country. The manufacturer knows more about his business than an outsider, and the same methods which have won a market for his goods in his own country will, naturally, furnish the key to the situation in the export problem, anything to the contrary written or said by theorists notwithstanding. In the same degree as the manufacturer, who keeps his eyes open, proceeds in the development of his foreign trade, he will adapt his sales methods to conform to the country and its people.

The only thing necessary for him to know consists in a general idea of the country, its people, the development of the country, the ways of reaching the inhabitants in order to sell goods to them, and the manner in which to take care of their trade most satisfactorily after it has been secured.

With this fact in mind, the author, whose long experience in actually selling goods to foreign customers, especially Cubans, puts him in a splendid position to review the situation and its underlying basis, has prepared this volume as a valuable help to the American exporter. This book is based on the ACTUAL EXPERIENCE of the author, not on misleading theories, and no effort has been spared in order to present the necessary information in as concise and practical a form as possible. Careful study of the following pages by the exporting manufacturer or dealer should result in a considerable increase in the trade relations between the United States and Cuba. That this should be so, is the fervent wish of the author based on the admiration which he feels for the United States as a whole, for their splendid championship of the rights of his down-trodden native country, the beautiful Island of Cuba — and on his gratitude as an individual to the progressive American business man, whose appreciation of the importance of the export trade has enabled the author to build up an export promotion agency of no small dimensions.

“General Descriptive Data.”

Characteristics of Country and People.

IN ORDER to arrive at an accurate conception of the most important characteristics of the Island of Cuba and the Cuban people, it is necessary and indispensable to keep in mind its geographical location, as an Island, as well as its social, political, economical and religious development during the Spanish reign; only then can we form an idea of the rank of Cuba in the concert of the nations of the world, and of the idiosyncrasies of the Cuban people.

Surrounded by the waters of the Atlantic, and situated in front of the Panama Canal, so that it can, to a certain extent, be considered the key to the Canal, and, therefore, to the two Americas, Cuba has been, is and will continue to be a stopping place for the steamers that ply between Europe and Latin America.

This continuous contact of the son of the Cuban soil with the foreigner has tended to educate alike rich and poor, and this is one of the reasons why so many of those who speak from an intimate knowledge of the subject, regard the Cuban, even of the lower classes, as equal to, and even superior to the corresponding class of any other Spanish-American country.

Another important factor is the scarcity of Indians, who have almost totally disappeared. It is true that to offset this, there is the colored race, but only to an extent of 20%, and it is a proven fact that the intermarriage of the races reduces the number of blacks surprisingly. In order to be able to understand this phenomenon of the decrease in the number of colored people, it suffices to consider that during the long years of the Spanish reign and even now, the Spaniard who emigrated or emigrates to Cuba, no matter of what class (which as it were, was seldom of the best or even middle class), found it impossible to connect himself with the better or middle class of the native white race. This is due to the political odium existing between the Spaniard and the Cuban; under such circumstances the Spaniard had to content himself with colored or mulatto associates, and his financial resources made it easy for him to dominate this race, either directly or indirectly.

Upon comparison with the colored race of other countries, even this colored race of Cuba is found to be equally superior, not only by virtue of its intelligence, but also on account of its kind and noble sentiments. Associating with the Spanish of higher or lesser financial independence, the influence of the mother reflects itself in her desire to educate her son the same as the sons of white parents, with the result that when the child arrives at maturity and realizes fully the combination of circumstances, which are responsible for his existence and his mixed parentage, he cannot suppress in himself his aversion for the Spanish. He shares this aversion with the white native, even to the extent of having bled and fallen together in the battles for a Free Cuba. For this reason, we refer to his kind and noble sentiments, for there exists between the black and native white population neither aversion, spite nor hatred, for they both fought with the single thought of establishing a common country.

The battles which the Cuban native carried on both as political battles against the autocratic power of Spain, as well as against the armed forces of the mother country, made the Cuban people perspicacious, astute, audacious, valiant and possessed of endurance.

Another fact which points to the good characteristics of the Cuban people is that, although for a long time there existed mortal hatred between the Cuban and the Spanish, this condition disappeared almost as soon as Cuban liberty was wrested from Spain, and today the Spanish and Cuban get along with each other better than they did during the Spanish reign of Cuba. This goes to prove that Cuba has realized what it means for her development to not only maintain, but increase the immigration of those who speak the same language, and whose customs, habits, and even beliefs are the same.

As a religious people, the Cubans may be classified as indifferent, which fact may be attributed to the abuse of religion as a weapon of corruption in the battle against Spain, and it is to be lamented that an institution as sacred as the Catholic religion, should have lent itself as an instrument in fighting political battles. Nevertheless, the Cuban home is found to be permeated with a profound religious spirit, which privately practices the principles of religion, but shuns the public services in church, in order not to come into contact with the priest, whom it did not trust, and considered as a spy, and, therefore, an enemy. Since the war for liberty, however, this condition has been gradually disappearing, although a number of years will yet have to elapse before it may be expected to disappear totally.

Looked at from an economic viewpoint, Cuba, even as a Colony, was at the mercy of American tariffs, and Spain had never exerted herself in finding new markets for Cuban products. Cuba, the independent nation, has, however, taken account of the situation, and has employed all available means in an effort to open up new markets, and she has now the satisfaction of seeing a much larger volume of export trade with other countries outside of the United States, than during the time of her dependency from Spain.

As regards sanitation, suffice it to say that Cuba today occupies second place among the nations of the world, and can be said to have almost reached the limit of perfection in this regard.

Even though the tropical climate of Cuba is hot, it is worthy of notice that the heat is not felt as much, nor does it affect the individual as much as the climate of the United States of North America. Heat prostrations are practically unknown; neither does one see the pitiful spectacle of a horse falling in the street overcome by the heat. Spacious residences, wide streets, the mode of dressing and living, and last, but not least, the sea breeze which is felt especially during the afternoon, at night and in the morning, all contribute to reduce the injurious effect of the heat on the human organism. The atmosphere is constantly saturated with a salty humidity, which greatly affects everything that is exposed to the air, and it is necessary to protect wood, metals, etc., against the deterioration, which would be caused by this combination of salt and humidity in the air.

The development and process of perfection that has taken place in establishing means of communication has greatly facilitated traveling from one end of the Island to the other, either by the Central Railway, which boasts of accommodations equal to those of the railroads of the United States, or by automobile, which can travel in all directions on splendid oiled roads, or by steamers, maintaining a fixed schedule, both along the North and South coast.

Inasmuch as Cuba has become a winter resort, the authorities and private enterprises exert themselves to the limit of their ability in providing entertainment of all kinds, in order not only to stimulate local trade, but also to attract tourists for whose distraction it is necessary to arrange Baseball Games, Boxing Bouts, Skating Rinks, Horse Races, and other forms of sport to which even the native has become greatly attached.

If we turn our attention to each one of the provinces composing the Isle of Cuba, and attempt to discern the particular characteristics of same, we observe the following:

PINAR DEL RIO:

The principal product of this province on which its very life depends, is tobacco, and the best tobacco of the Island, which has made Havana tobacco a byword among smokers of the civilized world, is raised in this Province.

HAVANA:

The importance of the location of the capital of the Island in this province, can be easily appreciated. Due to its size (Havana is the smallest province of the Island), the industrial importance of this province must remain limited; some of its industries have nevertheless attained considerable importance, for instance, the sponge fisheries, and pine apple culture.

MATANZAS AND SANTA CLARA:

These two provinces represent the center of the sugar industry, and boast of the majority of plantations and mills.

CAMAGUEY:

This province is of special importance as a cattle center. The raising of cattle has attained such dimensions that packed meats from this province are today being exported to Europe.

ORIENTE:

This is one of the most interesting provinces, and the variety of its products, together with its size, as one of the largest provinces, make it extremely rich.

The sugar industry of this province is carried on on a large scale, and it contains the largest sugar plantation of Cuba. Tobacco plantations are also numerous, and if the tobacco raised in Pinar del Rio is without a superior, that raised in Oriente goes hand in hand with it, and whereas the color and texture of the tobacco of Pinar del Rio make it especially desirable for wrappers, the aroma of the tobacco of Oriente is responsible for its being largely used for the body of cigars.

Being an extremely mountainous province, Oriente is the home of many of the more valuable kinds of wood. A good deal of mahogany is being exported from this province.

The province of Oriente is also noted for its rich mineral deposits, and in the southern part of the province we find large copper and manganese mines. At the time of this writing newly discovered deposits of potash promise to add to the importance of this province.

In view of the foregoing, it is hardly necessary to make an exhaustive study of the imports of Cuba to satisfy the American manufacturer and dealer at a glance that Cuba is a market for practically everything that can be sold advantageously in other countries similarly located. The experience of those who have devoted attention to the Cuban market, is sufficient proof to the effect that the Cuban appreciates the nice things of life, and that the individual lives as well as his economic and social position allows. It may be stated, in conclusion, that the wants of the Cuban people are many, and they are very eager to enlarge the scope of their wants to keep pace with the rest of the civilized world.

Immigration.

NOTHER of the many noteworthy facts to study about the Island of Cuba at present is immigration. In examining the statistics one is struck by two facts, one in regard to the increase in number of immigrants arriving on the Island of Cuba, and the other in regard to the variety of same.

It can be said that during the Spanish Dominion there were few other immigrants to the Island of Cuba but those from Spain, and in my opinion the principal reason the immigration did not increase during that period as it should was due to the unsanitary condition of the Island.

Today the Island of Cuba holds second place among the nations of the world in regard to sanitary conditions, and everyone is going to the Island of Cuba without any fear.

The following data have been taken from the information published by the Secretary of the Treasury, Statistic Division, corresponding to the "Immigración y Movimiento de Pasajeros", compiled by Mr. P. de la Torre, Chief of the Division.

I must publicly express my gratitude to Mr. P. de la Torre who either directly or indirectly furnished me very valuable information.

"The immigration of this year has exceeded that of the preceding year by 6,884. The total number of arrivals was 32,795, against 25,911 in the year 1914. Of the 32,795 there were 26,476 men and 6,319 women; 2,275 were under 14 years of age; 28,930 from 14 to 45 years; and 1,590 were over 45 years.

There are 24,501 Spaniards; 910 North Americans; 187 South Americans; 2,453 Haytians; 1,834 Jamaicans; 714 Mexicans; 840 Porto Ricans; 72 Central Americans; 329 English and 115 Natives of the Antilles not specified. Moreover, 840 Syrians, Russians, Persians, Swiss, Austro-Hungarians, etc. have arrived, and same are specified in the table, without special mention, as the number is insignificant.

Of the total number of immigrants (32,795), 24,258 are educated, 8,534 are analphabets and 3 know how to read only. 9,155 have been in Cuba before. The money displayed by these immigrants has been about 646,611 pesos (dollars).

In the movement of travelers the same has been noticed as in the immigration, an increase over the year 1914. This was 10,098 entering and 2,381 departing, resulting in a difference of 7,267 travelers in the increase of the entries and of the departures.

Of the 79,233 travelers entering, 53,072 were men; 17,456 women and 8,705 children. The departure amounted to 65,433; — 44,831 men, 14,205 women and 6,397 children.

Of the arrivals there were 29,690 coming from Spain and the Canary Islands; 36,251 from the United States of America; 4,511 from Mexico; 2,490 from Haiti; 2,161 from Central America; 1,785 from Jamaica; and 1,631 from Porto Rico. The balance of the 79,233 are divided among other countries in limited number.

Of the departing travelers 21,285 left for Spain and the Canary Islands; 36,588 for the United States; 3,172 for Mexico; 1,300 for Central America; 1,234 for Jamaica and the remainder of the 65,433 for other countries.”

Historical Information.

THE Island of Cuba, which on account of its beauty and enchantment, is known as "La Reina de las Antillas" (The Queen of the Antilles), and "La Perla de las Antillas" (The Pearl of the Antilles), was discovered by Christopher Columbus, the 28th day of October, 1492. In the course of time it has been known under several names, having been called "Juana", "Fernandina", "Santiago", "Ave Maria", and finally "Cuba".

The widest part of the Island is 117 miles, and the narrowest is 22 miles across.

There is a Central Railway going from East to West, which has all the imaginable accommodations of the modern railroads, that is, sleeping coaches, dining coaches, etc., having been inaugurated the 8th of December, 1902, with a daily service from Havana to Santiago, and its tracks are of standard gauge.

The Island of Cuba is divided into six Provinces, and we will consider each one of them concisely.

PINAR DEL RIO.

This province is called and is known the world over as "Vuelta Abajo", and is the easternmost part of the Island. This Province produces the tobacco, which has made Cuba famous, and which is called "Tabaco de Vuelta Abajo".

It has three of the best bays of the Island, namely, "Bahia de Mariel", "Bahia de Cabañas" and "Bahia Honda"; a United States Government Naval Station is located on the latter.

HAVANA.

It is the smallest Province, and contains the Capital of the Island, and, therefore, the Central Government, and the residence of the President of the Republic, Congress, that is, the House of Representatives and Senate, and the Diplomatic Body.

The Province of Havana is also noted for the large sponge fisheries of Batabanó, which is situated in the southern part of the Province.

On account of the quality and quantity of the sponges, this is one of the most important industries of the Province.

THE PRESIDENT'S PALACE.

It is a beautiful building which in the time of the Spanish rule was the residence of the Governor General, during the period of the American Intervention was the Headquarters of the Military Government, and now is the residence of the President of the Republic. It was built in the year 1834, and has been kept in good condition.

THE TEMPLETE — (Small Temple).

This chapel was built in the year 1828, to commemorate the date and place where the first mass was celebrated, when Diego de Velazquez founded Havana in 1519.

This chapel is only opened once a year, and this on the 16th of November, which is St. Christopher's day, the Patron Saint of Havana.

The chapel has a bronze tablet, which reads as follows:

“Reinando el Señor Don Fernando VII, siendo Presidente y Gobernador Don Francisco Dionisio Vives, la Fidelisima Habana, Religiosa y Pacifica, erigio este sencillo monumento, decorando el sitio donde el año 1519 se celebró la primera misa y Cabildo; el Obispo Don Juan José Diaz de Espada solemnizó el mismo agosto sacrificio el 9 de Marzo de 1828”.

(“During the reign of His Majesty Don Fernando VII, and the incumbency of Don Francisco Dionisio Vives, as President and Governor, the faithful, religious and pacific Havana erected this simple monument to decorate the spot where in the year 1519 the first mass and chapter was celebrated; Bishop Don José Diaz de Espada solemnized this august sacrifice on the 9th day of March, 1828”)

THE CATHEDRAL.

It was begun in the year 1656, but was not finished until the year 1724.

The most notable thing to see in the Cathedral is the vault in which the remains of Christopher Columbus were buried, when they were sent from Santo Domingo to the Island of Cuba.

This vault is on the left hand side in the rear, and here the remains of Columbus remained until they were placed in a magnificent monument which was erected in the center of the Cathedral, whence they were, later on, removed and taken to Seville, Spain, where they now are.

There has been a dispute about the authenticity of the remains of Christopher Columbus which now rest in Seville, since it is said that the remains sent to Cuba from Santo Domingo were not the remains of Columbus, and others say that those sent to Cuba were the remains of Columbus, but that those sent from Cuba to Seville were not.

MORRO CASTLE.

It is perhaps the principal stronghold of the Island of Cuba. It was started in the year 1587 by Royal Order of King Felipe II of Spain, the maker of the plans being Mr. Don Juan B. Antonelli.

Among the annals of the History of the Morro Castle figures the heroic defense of the brave Luis de Velasco, Commander of the Castle, and Marques de Gonzales, who lost their lives defending it, before it was surrendered to the English in the year 1762.

In this Castle is the lighthouse, which is one of the most notable that is known, its light or flash being visible eighteen miles.

LA CABANA FORTRESS.

The Cabaña Fortress possesses historic importance for the Cubans, since in the Fortress is what is known as "Foso de los Laureles" (Ditch of the Laurels), so called on account of the laurel trees which grow there. At this place the Spanish Government had the Cuban political prisoners shot. The bullet holes can be seen in the wall, upon which has been placed a bronze tablet obtained by money collected through popular subscription.

CASTLE OF LA FUERZA — (The Force).

The Castle of La Fuerza is the oldest fortification of the American Continent next to the Fort at Santo Domingo.

It was begun in 1538 by instruction or order of Don Fernando de Soto, then Governor General of the Island, who at that time resided at Santiago, which was then the Capital of the Island.

When Don Fernando de Soto went to Florida, he took with him the Commanding Officer of the Castle of La Fuerza, who left his wife, Dona Isabella de Bobadilla, in charge of the Castle, and here she died of a broken heart, as her husband never returned.

NATIONAL THEATRE.

It is also called Teatro Tacon (Tacon Theatre), named after the Commander, General Tacon. It was built in the year 1837 by Don Francisco Marti, costing the sum of $400,000. It has a capacity of 4,000 people, being the third largest theatre of the world. Its acoustic conditions are remarkable and unsurpassed.

COLON CEMETERY.

This Cemetery is considered the second in the world as an exhibition of remarkable sculpture and carved work.

Works of some of the most important and notable sculptors of Europe can be found in this Cemetery.

The Students' Monument, the Firemen's Monument, that of General Calixto Garcia, and many others are marvelous works of art, which everyone admires.

MATANZAS.

Matanzas, the capital of the Province of Matanzas, is also called the "Ciudad de los dos Rios" (The City of the Two Rivers).

The Province of Matanzas is one of the most picturesque provinces, and has the beautiful Valley of Yumuri and the celebrated Caves of Bellamar.

SANTA CLARA.

In the Province is located the largest number of sugar plantations.

In the southern part of said Province is the "Bahia de Cienfuegos" (Bay of Cienfuegos — One Hundred Fires), which is considered one of the best in the world.

CAMAGUEY.

This Province was formerly known as the "Provincia de Puerto Principe" (Province of Prince Port). It is important for cattle raising.

It has been the birthplace of some great and illustrious men of Cuba and the whole world.

ORIENTE.

The Province of Oriente is noted for its sugar production, and its copper, iron and manganese mines.

In this Province is located the City of Baracoa, the oldest city of the Island of Cuba, since it was founded by Diego de Velazquez in 1511.

The City of Guantanamo in the Province is at present a coaling and naval station of the United States of America.

The Capital of the Province is Santiago, "La Ciudad Soñada de las Indias" (Dreamy City of the Indies), of historic fame on account of the battles, and the naval battle of Santiago.

Religious Evolution.

ONLY eight years had elapsed from the time of the arrival and establishment of the Spaniards in the Island of Cuba, when the Diocese of Baracoa, under the name of "Asunción" was established by Papal Bull of Pope Leo X. A great deal has been said about who was the first Bishop of Cuba, but we think that the preponderance of authority is to the effect that Juan Garces de la O. P. was the first, and he did not occupy the See.

One should bear in mind, as a mere historic fact, that no Bishop resided in Baracoa, which See was suppressed later on by Pope Adrian VI, in 1552, i. e., in the year when Velazquez died.

In the year 1523 the Diocese of Santiago was founded, the first one to occupy same being Juan de Witte, who, according to general opinion, belonged to the "Orden de Predicadores", and who never took up his official residence in it, renouncing it in 1527.

One must also bear in mind that during all this time, the religious administration of Florida, Jamaica and the other Islands was annexed to Santiago until the end of the Eighteenth Century, when Santiago was declared Metropolitan (Archiepiscopal Church), the Diocese of Havana also being established.

During this time, the Church was governed by decrees or orders of the "Concilio Provincial" (Provincial Assembly of Bishops) of Santo Domingo, assembled in 1622. On the 4th of March, 1673, the King of Spain ordered the Bishop Vera Calderon to call together a Synod, which was held in 1684 under the administration of Bishop Juan Garcia de Palacios.

The first established Religious Order in the Island of Cuba were the "Clarisas" (Clare, nun of the Order of St. Clara), in 1644.

The "Jesuitas" (Jesuits) were established in Cuba in 1721.

During the time that Cuba was a Spanish Colony, the Bishops were usually Spanish, and to be frank, Cuba has had Prelates of great merit, such as, for example: P. Claret, who had the reputation of a Saint. D. Diego Evelino de Compostela, who was a sage. D. Jacinto Maria Martinez y Saiz, in whose time the Ten Years' War broke out, and for whom the Cubans feel eternal gratitude, since the letters which this worthy Prelate wrote at that time in favor of the Cubans, who were banished, are of great historical value to Cuba.

The last Spanish prelates of the Spanish Rule in Cuba were Mons. Saenz de Utri, Archbishop of Santiago, y Mons. Santander y Trutos, Bishop of Havana, who resigned at the time of the American Intervention.

The first Prelate of Cuba, after the Spanish Colony, was the learned and virtuous Monsignor Barnada y Aguiar of Santiago who occupied the Archbishopric of Santiago.

At the time of the birth of Independent Cuba there were the dioceses of Cienfuegos, Pinar del Rio, Matanzas and Camaguey, and at the present time the Island of Cuba is divided into five Bishoprics and the Metropolitan See of Santiago..

Sanitation and its Progress

IT IS unquestionably true that a great change has taken place in Cuba, since it has become independent, and this change is especially noticeable in sanitation. Considering the results achieved such as extirpation of the yellow fever, etc., it is readily apparent, that one who would write an article on the progress of sanitation in Cuba, must possess a scientific knowledge of the points involved, and it would be absurd on the part of the author and unjust to the readers for him to pretend to possess the necessary qualifications.

We are, therefore, copying verbatim the English article which the distinguished and notable Doctor of Medicine, Mr. Jorge Le Roy y Cassa, Chief of Statistics, published in the "Boletín Oficial de la Secretaría de Sanidad y Beneficencia" (Official Bulletin of the Department of Sanitation and Beneficence), Volume X, Numbers 1, 2, and 3.

I also wish to take advantage of this opportunity to express my deepest gratitude to a personal friend and fellow-countryman, Dr. Le Roy y Cassa, for his kindness in furnishing me said information, and in this way cooperating in the publication of this book.

SANITATION IN CUBA — ITS PROGRESS.

By DR. JORGE LE ROY Y CASSA, M. D.

To promote the health of a people, is to prepare it for its freedom.

The sentence which serves as a heading for this article, may be said to condense the historic evolution of our Sanitation.

In order to demonstrate the certainty of this assertion, I have made patient bibliographic researches which have led me to present with the most eloquent data — statistics — the successive epochs of our sanitary development.

Inasmuch as I understand that History is the teacher of humanity, I have resorted to its study in order to appreciate the manner in which we have lived in our country, and its teachings have shown me errors of appreciation on the one hand, negligence and neglect of hygienic precepts on the other. In the same way, the study of the data which I will present further on, has shown me the greatness of science, besides the need of establishing its precepts in an energetic manner, almost militarily, when the majority of the people which are to be submitted to its dictation is not in condition to accept them through the conviction derived from its rational application.

It can be stated that Cuba began her intellectual life during the last third of the Eighteenth Century. It was necessary that the English should conquer the capital of the island in 1762, in order that the great transformation which was to make her known to the world, could take place; not to make Cuba known as the rendezvous of vessels bearing the wealth of the American continent to Spain, but as the key to the New World. The Treaty of Versailles restored to the Spanish Government, the lost factory now transformed into a colony, and on July 7th, 1763, Count Riela on taking solemn possession of the lost country, began the period of the true Cuban restoration. The mother country sent illustrious men, and the names of the Marquis de la Torre and Luis de las Casas filled with their work the last epoch of the Eighteenth Century. A new era sprang up in which the governors and the governed minded only the fulfillment of their civic duties and the welfare of their native country, as well as the country whose rule was entrusted to them.

The Nineteenth Century begins with two events of a paramount importance in the sanitary history of our people. I refer to the introduction of Jenner's vaccine, and the burial in cemeteries outside of places of worship. Two names cast the rays of their glory on these two events: that of the never-to-be-forgotten Bishop Espada, and that of Dr. Tomás Romay.

Small-pox, which had caused considerable ravages in the population since the Conquest, was now to be efficaciously combated, for soon after Jenner had practiced the first inoculation (May 14th, 1796), the French surgeons Mr. Vignard or Duvigneau, of the island of St. Thomas, inoculated while at Santiago de Cuba, on January 12th, 1804, a child with virus brought between glass slides; and Dr. Miguel Rolland, on February 26th, had already propagated same to one hundred and fifteen persons. In Havana the small-pox vaccination could not begin until the 12th of February of the same year 1804, the virus being obtained from the son and of two slave girls of María Bustamante, who arrived two days before from Aguadilla (Porto Rico). With this virus Dr. Romay inoculated his five children and besides thirty-one persons more, and propagating it hence, thanks to the support of the Bishop, and obtaining such a success that when on May 26th, there arrived Dr. Francisco X. Balmis sent by Charles IV, the commissioner was agreeably surprised to find vaccination firmly established by so intelligent a physician as Dr. Romay, whom he considered as a "sage" on reporting to His Catholic Majesty his work on the island. The result of this sanitary campaign is shown with the date taken from "EL AVISO", a Havana newspaper, dated Thursday, October 10th, 1805, which says that alone in the year 1804 there had been interred in the Capuchine Order

Cemetery "nearly eight hundred bodies of children dead from small-pox"; and in the general cemetery where according to the same paper "where are buried all who die in the city and the nearly extramural wards, only two small-pox deads have been interred in the previous year" (EL AVISO, Sunday, February 7th, 1808).

In that year (1807), 3,745 persons were vaccinated in Havana and its vicinity; the total number of those vaccinated in the island being 7,358.

The second event I have referred to, i. e.: interments outside of churches, which led to the building of a general cemetery, was proposed by Bishop Espada at a meeting held by the "Sociedad Patriótica de Amigos del País de la Habana", on January 27th, 1803, who overcame all the obstacles which opposed the carrying out of so important a work, directing it himself and in coöperation with Dr. Romay finally led to its inauguration. It was dedicated "To Religion. To Public Health" *) on February 2nd, 1806, the first bodies to be buried there, being those of Diego Manrique, Governor and Captain General of the island; and that of José González Candámo, Bishop of Milasa and auxiliary of this diocese, both dying as the result of black vomit, the former on July 13th, 1765, and the latter on September 12th, 1801. Thus was abolished forever the pernicious promiscuity of having the living and the dead in the same temple and leading to the rapid spread of the custom of cemetery burials throughout the island.

In the same way that these two capital events led at the birth of the Nineteenth Century, two others still more important on account of their more general application, came to characterize the beginning of the Twentieth Century. I have reference to the confirmation of the doctrine upheld by Finlay since 1881, with regard to the etiology of Yellow Fever, and its application leading to the eradication of that nosologic entity from our mortuary tables; the other being the nationalization of the sanitary services, giving them a uniform character throughout the territory of the Republic.

Again it was necessary for foreign influence to bring about the application of these measures, the importance of which has been so universal that it transformed completely the prophylactic treatment of Yellow Fever. It was necessary that the horrors of the War of Independence should have brought about the American Intervention, so that the Medical Commission of the U. S. Army could undertake the researches which led to the full confirmation of the mosquito doctrine propounded by Finlay, and that so energetic a man as Dr. W. C. Gorgas, with all the authority conferred by the military power represented by another illustrious physician, General Leonard Wood, could apply the measures derived from Finlay's ideas.

To get rid of Yellow Fever, the first measure adopted was the appointment of an expert commission to diagnosticate every case considered as suspicious, in order to protect it against the stegomyas, thus avoiding the infection of that kind of mosquitoes. This commission may be said to have been the barrier that forever came to lock out that endemic scourge which devastated our people since 1671.

Sanitation in colonial days was rudimentary, but not because there were not men of good will and scientific societies constantly protesting against the multiple disregard of all hygienic precepts and of pointing out the measures to avoid and correct such abuses; no, it is sufficient to read our medical literature to get the notion that the even referred to were known and denounced. But it happened that those called upon to correct these evils lacked the necessary authority, and besides, they were pervaded with such a moslem fatalism that induced them to think that those measures recommended by scientific men were utterly inadequate to cope with such ill — black vomit — against which they declared themselves as impotent, and which in truth caused the greater part of our sanitary disasters. Yellow Fever was considered by all as a tribute, which every one coming to our shores, had to pay; and furthermore it was believed that the native Cubans were not susceptible to the disease in spite of Finlay's demonstration in regard to the former that the said tribute could be avoided and that Dr. Guiteras has pointed out that the natives, especially the children could suffer from same.

Two decrees, one No. 159, dated on the 17th of May, 1902, dictated by the Government of the first American Intervention, and the other, No. 894, dated on the 26th of August, 1907, dictated during the second Intervention, mark the greatest advance in our sanitation. The first of these decrees, may be considered as the foundation upon which rests the whole sanitary organization of Cuba. By it, there was created the Superior Board of Health, with ample powers relative to health problems. The local boards of health created by this decree in every municipality were really prolongations of the Superior Board of Health and drafted the Sanitary Ordinances, wherein are found in a condensed manner the precepts which are to be complied with in all problems relative to sanitation.

Doctors J. A. Malberti and P. Albarran, members of the House of Representatives, presented before the Cuban Congress two bills dealing with a sanitary law, but these failed to pass; and it was not until the second Intervention, that Sanitary Supervisor, Dr. Jefferson R. Kean, succeeded in promulgating decrees Number 894 and 1187, by which all of our sanitary services were nationalized and both the land and marine sanitation were united, removing the latter service from the control of the Department of the Treasury which had it under its supervision.

All this brought about the establishment in January, 1909 of the Department of Sanitation and Charities, giving its head a seat in the Cabinet of Secretaries of the National Executive, a fact that permits that organism to exert its beneficent influence throughout the extent of our national territory. In connection with this, it is to be noticed that it has been the lot of Cuba to have the glory of being the first country to have such a national department, the results of which will be shown further on by the figures in the tables accompanying this work.

I have said before that the study of the conditions of the life of our people, have shown me errors in appreciation on the one hand and neglect and negligence of hygienic precepts on the other. The former are founded in that considering that Cuba is a country with a tropical climate, it has to be perforce a most unhealthy and deadly region, and as such it was unjustly classified by a Spanish military surgeon.

Finlay, in a work published in 1878, said: "The means available to the hygienist in order to estimate the salubrity of a country consist on the one hand in the meteorological and topographic conditions, which offer presumptive evidence in favor or against a locality; and on the other, in the vital statistics which become decisive argument whenever there are good guarantees of exactness and good care has been taken to eliminate causes of errors, separating carefully the various contradictory elements which are liable to be confounded." *)

Regarding the meteorologic conditions, Dr. Finlay himself in the Academy of Medical Sciences of Havana, on the 10th of November of the same year, pointed out, "that the meteorologic conditions place our climate on a more advantageous position in comparison with that of the other islands of the West Indies, because of its higher barometric pressure, its more extensive thermometric excursions with averages more marked for the several seasons of the year, less rain fall and a relative lower humidity. **)

The interesting meteorologic observations carried out by the Observatory of Belen College of Havana, show that our climate should be considered as remarkably benign among the tropical countries, due to the refrigerating action of the winds to which contribute the narrow and elongated shape of the island, and its situation from the south-east to the north-west, almost perpendicular to the Alesian air current. The annual mean barometric pressure is 761.40; the mean temperature for the year is also 24°9 C. and the average relative humidity is 74.7; which reveals, that on the whole it is not very high in spite of the great evaporation in these seas having such relative high temperature, to which may be added the action of the equatorial currents.

In regard to the neglect and negligence of the hygienic precepts to which

) Anales de la R. Academia, etc. 1878, vol. XV, p. 262.

I have referred to before, it is sufficient to fix one's attention on any of the numerous works written on the subject by our men of science in order to appreciate them; but inasmuch as the enumeration of these would be rather lengthy, I will only make reference to the work presented by Marcos de J. Melero before the said Academy of Sciences entitled: "Reseña estadística acerca de la Mortalidad en la Isla de Cuba" (Statistical Description of the Mortality in the Island of Cuba), which is also linked to the climatic problem. In the mentioned work, he states that: "there is nothing more unjust than to call unhealthy on account of its climate, a city which only on account of its dwellers is not really healthy as compared with other localities of the same hot regions and even temperate ones, which enjoy the fame of being healthy, thanks to the observance of the wise principles of hygiene." And he added: "Havana, should be said, could be a city that should not envy any regarding salubrity if there were not here perpetual foci of conspirations against all the laws of public hygiene, which foci are easily found without any great effort." *)

The other factor necessary to value exactly the salubrity or insalubrity of a country is its vital statistics; hence I have granted to it the most prominent place in this work. In order that its data may have the necessary guarantees of exactness, I have gathered those of Havana, and those pertaining to the Republic only in so far as the last ten years are concerned, because the Republic as such, did not exist prior to the 20th of May, 1902, and from the beginning of 1903 I am in charge of the sanitary and vital statistics service, being able therefore, to guarantee in the chapter of mortality the exactness of the representative figures owing to the organization of the mentioned service.

I have presented in the table number 1, not only the estimated population for each year in Havana since 1801, availing myself of the census recognized as good and which summaries I give in another table, but besides the total number of deaths from all causes and the mortality coefficient for each year, excepting 1801, 1805 and 1807, years for which, in spite of researches made in our libraries, as well as the Congressional Library in Washington, I have not been able to obtain any source of information.

Besides, I have studied, availing myself for the remote data of the Obituary Tables of our hygienist, Dr. Ambrosio González del Valle and the statistical publications of Dres. Vicente de la Guardia, M. Delfín and W. C. Gorgas in regards to such diseases as Yellow fever, malaria, tetanus and small-pox which represented the hindrance to our progress and the phantom which prevented immigration to our shores; the immigration necessary for the development of our wealth, and the aggrandizement of the country. I have also added tables showing the efforts realized to combat tuberculosis and typhoid fever; also another one with the principle contagious diseases, that is to say, the preventable diseases if the appropriate sanitary measures are observed.

In the curve representing the mortality of Havana during the Nineteenth and Twentieth Centuries until the present days, I have pointed out the epidemics which have contributed to raise the higher summits, predominating those of Yellow fever, but not meaning by this, that disease did not prevail constantly but merely that in the years mentioned there was an epidemic recrudescence.

From the study of said table No. 1 and its graphic representation there are derived teachings which confirm my previous assertion. In fact, if a horizontal line be traced starting from the point which marks the coefficient of 20×1000 , one notices at once, that during the first Century studied there are only two years, those of 1846 and 1848, in which the figures corresponding to them are below that straight line, and only descend ten and fifty-nine hundredths respectively, while in the twelve consecutive years of the second century, there are six which do not reach that line, and the remaining six pass it only by figures of two and one-fourth units.

If instead of tracing the horizontal starting from the coefficient of 20, we start from that of 50, it will be noticed that there exist thirteen years which surpass the mentioned straight line, a fact which can be verified by the following table:

1816	51.27	} Yellow fever.
1817	54.71
1818	55.66
1819	57.09
1820	54.43
1833	76.62	} Asiatic cholera.
1868	51.75
1870	51.44	} Small-pox.
1877	51.41	} War: Yellow fever, small-pox, ma-
1878	57.86
1896	50.98	} War: Reconcentration and Blockade.
1897	77.34
1898	89.19

If the first hundred years are divided in decennial periods and their respective averages are estimated as shown in the following table:

1801—1810*)	37.96
1811—1820	46.70

*) Estimated only for seven years, because of the lack of data for 1801, 1805 and 1807.

1821—1830	36.17
1831—1840	32.34
1841—1850	23.27
1851—1860	26.17
1861—1870	42.04
1871—1880	44.97
1881—1890	34.18
1891—1900	43.82
Average for the century	36.76
1901—1910	20.54

it is noticed that the figures fluctuate between 23.27 (1841-1850) which is the minimum, and 46.70 (1811-1820), the maximum, with a total average for the Nineteenth Century of 36.76, while for the first ten years of this century the average is 20.54; and if instead of taking the ten years, we estimate the average for the twelve years, it will come down to 20.08. The existing difference of 16.68 in favor of our times reveals the potentiality in the application of the sanitary measures adopted, doing away completely with small-pox and yellow fever, and diminishing the coefficients of malaria, tetanus, tuberculosis and typhoid fever, as well as almost all of the contagious diseases, a fact easily proven by glancing at the respective tables; besides we have shut off from our territory cholera which threatened us with its proximity and we have smothered bubonic plague on its appearance in Havana in June, 1912.

Legislation of the Republic of Cuba.

IT IS, of course, quite outside the scope of this book to furnish a course in Cuban law and to acquaint the reader with the maxims covering this or that particular case. Legal advice should be procured from a professional lawyer, established in the Island of Cuba.

Experience has shown that the best mode of procedure in the case of some disagreement with a Cuban importer consists in first trying to get exact information as to the reliability and integrity of the party. By writing to one or two of the local banks, submitting the case to them, one can very often get from the banks an estimate of the party's standing and reliability, and also the opinion of the financial institution as to the merits of the complaint and the proper procedure to be followed. If an importer is known to his community as "tricky" and wont to take unfair advantage of those with whom he does business, such a tendency on his part does not remain a secret very long to the local banks, and the exporter will in that case feel more justified in prosecuting his claim; on the other hand, if the party is known as a man of integrity, one can very often adjust matters with him in a different way, and keep his trade. In such a case it is ordinarily worth more to effect a compromise than to bring suit.

It should be borne in mind that the Cuban law is based on the Spanish law, and with some slight changes is, therefore, essentially similar to the Spanish. This applies to both the civil, as well as the criminal branches of the law.

The banks in each city are generally in a position and willing to recommend a good, reliable lawyer, in case the services of one should become necessary. In that case, it is necessary to furnish him with a power of attorney, and care should be taken that the document is made out in conformance with the requirements of Cuban procedure, even though it may be quite different from the procedure in this country.

In order to possess validity in a Cuban court of law, and serve as the basis of an action, powers of attorney and other documents must be signed by the interested parties, and these signatures must be verified by a notary, and the signature of the latter certified by the Secretary of State of the State in which the manufacturer or merchant resides, or by the Clerk of the Circuit Court of the State in which the merchant is established. Next, the Cuban Consul residing in that locality, or the nearest Cuban Consul, certifies to the legality of the document. Without his certification the document possesses no value in the Republic of Cuba.

The Consular Fees paid to the Consul for certifying a document, vary according to the nature of the document.

After all the requirements regarding signatures, attestation, certification, etc., have been complied with, the document should best be sent by Registered Mail to the legal representative in Cuba.

The expenses connected with prosecuting claims in Cuban courts are generally higher, owing not only to the higher fees charged by Cuban lawyers, but also due to the additional fees of attestation and certification of documents by the Consul, etc., and translations into Spanish, which expenses must be borne by the plaintiff.

Diplomatic and Consular Body.

It is sometimes necessary to request information, either from the Representative of Cuba in the United States of America, or vice versa from the Representative of the United States in the Island of Cuba, the following list of places in which they are located, will serve as a guide in this respect.

If one takes into consideration that a Consular Invoice is needed for all shipments from the United States to Cuba, and that it is therefore necessary to take or send the necessary documents to the corresponding Consular office for certification, the importance of this list is apparent.

In addressing the consulate, one should not mention the name of the Consul, but merely indicate the location, as, for example: "Cuban Consulate, Chicago, Ill." In this way delays may be avoided which could otherwise occur in the case of the absence or removal of a Consul to whom a letter had been addressed personally.

Imports and Exports of the Island of Cuba.

It is true that the Island of Cuba is a natural and logical market for the manufactured products of the United States of America, and that proximity and a preferential tariff afford the American exporter a tremendous advantage over the European. It is nevertheless worthy of notice, and bears witness to the intensive campaign for the Cuban trade by European manufacturers, that, whereas Cuba sells to the United States 81.1% of her total exports, she buys from the United States only 67.4% of her imports, as can be readily seen by the comparative table of Imports and Exports.

A careful study of the tables below, showing kinds and proportions of different merchandise imported by Cuba from different countries, should prove valuable and productive of results to the keen American exporter and put him on the road towards regaining that part of the Cuban trade which he has negligently allowed to go to his oversea competitors. With continued, intelligent effort this should be an easy matter, especially, if one considers the crippled condition of European industries which must result from the present European War.

In the following pages we reproduce the official figures on various imports of the years 1914 and 1915, showing the imports from the United States of America, and those from all other countries in different columns for the two years. We believe that the data submitted should be helpful to the manufacturer or exporter in determining the condition of the market for his own particular goods. In comparing these figures, the effect of the European War should be taken into consideration. Inasmuch as the European War broke out during the second half of 1914, the imports were not so much affected during that year, and the figures can easily be construed as representing a 90% correct statistic of what the imports would have amounted to during 1914 had the European War not broken out during that year. A careful comparison of the 1915 figures will disclose two noteworthy facts; first — that, owing to the shutting off during the last months of 1914 and during all of the year of 1915, of some of the European markets, to which some of the principal products of Cuba had been exported, the Cuban people had to retrench and practice a strict economy, which resulted in lessened importation; second — that during 1915 the imports from the United States of America were comparatively heavier than imports from other countries. In order to arrive at a true appreciation of this increase in imports in favor of the United States, one should, therefore, not compare so much the imports of 1915 from the United States with the imports of 1914 from this country, but rather the percentage which the imports bore to the total 1915 imports, compared with the percentage, which the 1914 imports from the United States bore to the total imports of 1914.

The figures in this chapter have been taken from the annual report of the Cuban Government and represent an itemized review of the foreign commerce of the Republic of Cuba.

We desire to call special attention to the following table and its graphic presentation on the next page. It should be noted that, whereas the percentage of imports from the United States of America during 1915 was 67.4% of the total imports, the duty paid on these articles amounted to only 54.2% of the total duty paid on all imports. On the other hand, this table shows that the percentage of duty paid on imports from any and all other countries was higher than the percentage of the value of these imports to the total value of all imports. This proves conclusively the immense advantage enjoyed by the American exporter by virtue of the reciprocal duty reductions between the two countries.

The Sugar Industry.

AS THE production of sugar is the principal industry of the Island of Cuba, some few data in regard to same are of the highest importance to the American exporter. It will be noted from the tables of statistics of the sugar production from the year 1856 to 1915, that the sugar industry was not properly developed during the Spanish reign, but since Cuba became a free and independent nation, the sugar industry has acquired enormous proportions, as can be appreciated by the statistics of the last few years, bearing witness to the prosperity of the country. The prosperity of the whole Island of Cuba can be said to depend as much, if not more, on the production and favorable market of sugar (and tobacco), as for instance the South of the United States depends on its cotton crop, etc.

It should be borne in mind that the needs of the sugar mills besides their own consumption for operating their plants, is enormous, since, as a rule, every one of them has one or more establishments where everything for covering the infinite needs of the thousands of working people is sold; these establishments are controlled by the owners of the sugar mills.—These company stores always buy wholesale and in large quantities; therefore, I am furnishing a list of all sugar plantations in the Island of Cuba.

In the course of each year, there is a period called “muerto” (dead), extending from March to November, when the workers simply plant the cane, and the number of workers employed at that time is smaller than during the period called “de la Zafra” (of the Sugar Crop), which is from the month of December to the month of February. Then the cane is ground, and this is the period of life and activity.

SUGAR PLANTATIONS: There are 177 (seven more than in 1913-14). There are 7 in the Province of Pinar del Rio, 20 in Havana, 40 in Matanzas, 68 in Santa Clara, 9 in Camaguey and 33 in Oriente. Pinar del Rio has the same number of sugar plantations as the year before, Havana increased one, Matanzas decreased one, Santa Clara increased two, Camaguey two and Oriente three. Of the 177 sugar plantations that are being operated, 76 are the property of natives, 44 of Americans (U. S. A.), 44 of Spanish, and 13 of other nationalities, as English, French, etc.

The manufacturer of, or wholesale dealer in machinery, etc., required by the Sugar Refineries and Plantations, or of the manifold products consumed by the employees of same, will find the following complete and up-to-date list of Sugar Refineries and Plantations of considerable value.

Out of the 177, which compose the list, there are 31* of what are known in the Sugar Industry as "Ingenios" (Refineries), which means they only grind and make sugar from the sugar cane which they themselves raise.— The other 146* are known as "Centrales", meaning they not only grind the sugar cane they raise, but also sugar cane raised by others.

"Ingenios" are marked in this list with an asterisk (*), and in writing to them, the word "Ingenio" should be placed before the name shown in the first column of the list, e. g. — Ingenio Angelita, Matanzas, Cuba. (To insure delivery of letter, the name of the owners (column 3 of table) should be made a part of the address).

The word "Central" should be placed before the name in the first column, when writing to any of those not marked with an asterisk (*), e. g. — Central Adela, Santa Clara, Cuba. (To insure delivery of letter, the name of the owners (column 3 of table) should be made a part of the address).

*According to list, and not counting those that do not grind this year.

The Tobacco Industry.

THE two principal industries of Cuba, on which the wealth and economical life of Cuba depends, are the Sugar and Tobacco Industries. Just as the Sugar Industry represents the power and grandeur which follows in the wake of monetary wealth, the history of the Tobacco Industry is to a remarkable degree interwoven with the general history of the Cuban people. In all the revolutionary movements of the Cuban people against the mother country until the time when Cuba fulfilled her ambition of being a free country, it was the tabaquero (tobacco worker), who was always ready to sacrifice himself in some way or other for the revolutionary cause. Thus, we see him give up 5% of his day's wages at first, 10% later, and still later a whole day's work, in order to provide the funds which Marti (The Apostle of Cuba) employed to create a free and independent Cuba.

In the first stages of colonization, both tobacco and sugar were imported, and only with the passing of time have both these industries acquired the enormous proportions of which they boast today, due to the favorable climatic and topographic condition of the country.

The Tobacco plantations are called "Vegas de Tabaco" (a 'Vega' being in general parlance land located in the valleys between mountains, and adjacent to a river, from which follows that in order to be fit for tobacco culture, the land must possess a certain degree of humidity).

As is readily understood the tobacco produced in different parts of the Island is not of the same quality, and the tobacco originating from the districts known as Vuelta Abajo, Vuelta Arriba and Semi-Vuelta has achieved the highest renown. Vuelta Abajo comprises the Province of Pinar del Rio, Vuelta Arriba the eastern part, and Semi-Vuelta the central part of the Island; the best known tobacco being that from Vuelta Abajo, which to the outside world is better known as Havana Tobacco.

The culture of tobacco has been gradually perfected and improved along scientific lines, with a view to producing in some instances a mild, fine tobacco. in others a strong, but nevertheless, not ordinary tobacco. The scientific development of tobacco culture can, for instance, be appreciated, if one considers that today there are plantations where tobacco is being raised under the cover of tents, thus filtering the strong, direct rays of the sun, which results in an unusually delicate and mild tobacco. The fact that the records of one prominent cigar factory of Havana show that the cigars manufactured by that Company range in price from $40.00 to $2,500.00 per thousand (with an average of $90.00 per thousand) will serve as an illustration of the quality of the Cuban tobacco and workmanship.

The exportation of Cuban tobacco, both in bulk and manufactured, is large, and in order to appreciate this fact, it is only necessary to study the statistical data below.

As is readily understood, the European War has greatly affected the market for Cuban tobacco, but with the return of normal times, the advantage possessed by Cuba, as a producer of tobacco, both on account of the favorable climatic and topographical conditions, as well as knowledge of proper cultivation, will undoubtedly soon restore the former importance of this branch of Cuban industry.

Tariff.

UNDER the Spanish regime, the customs tariff of Cuba was patterned after the Spanish tariff, with lower rates of duty in favor of imports from Spain. During the American intervention the low rates of duty on imports from Spain were extended to imports from all countries.

Of supreme interest to the American manufacturer, however, remains the reciprocity treaty of 1902, granting special rebates of duties on imports which are the product of the soil or industry of the United States of North America. These reductions of import duty on United States products range from 20 to 40 per cent. For a detailed enumeration we refer the reader to the treaty itself, of which the official English version is rendered at the end of this chapter.

Several questions have arisen as to what constitutes production or manufacture in the United States within the meaning of the treaty. In one decision (January 19, 1905), the rule is laid down that to constitute manufacture, there must be a transformation which changes the nature of the materials, resulting in an entirely distinct and different product; for example, furniture made from foreign lumber, cloth woven from foreign silk or wool, and drugs compounded from foreign salts would be entitled to the concessions, but not roasted coffee, when merely the roasting process was performed in the United States. By an earlier decision, fabrics woven elsewhere, but bleached, printed, or embroidered in the United States, were recognized as manufactured in the United States.

The duties imposed may be either a certain percentage of the value (ad valorem duties), or a specified amount per unit or multiple of units of weight, measure, or quantity (specific duties). Whereas formerly ad valorem duties were practically unknown in the Cuban tariff, there appears at present a large number of items in the Cuban tariff subject to ad valorem duties. This may be ascribed to American influence.

Unless the tariff specifies that the dutiable weight shall be the "gross weight" or the "net weight", the dutiable weight is understood to be the gross weight decreased by the allowance for tare, as shown in the "Third Provision" of the "Rules for the Application of the Tariff."

In this connection, it will often be found to result in quite a saving in the amount of duty, if articles of a different tariff classification are included in the same case with another article, inasmuch as in such cases where articles of a different classification are included in the same case, the duty is figured on the actual net weight of each. If, on the other hand, the case contains articles of the same classification, and they are such as, according to the tariff, are subject to a certain amount of tare allowance from the gross weight, it will often be found that the actual net weight is a good deal less than the technical net weight obtained by subtracting from the gross weight the percentage specified in the "Rules for Application of the Tariff". In case that no article of a different classification is included with such a shipment, the importer will have to pay more duty than otherwise. Of course, it can also work the other way, and it may sometimes be more advantageous to the importer to have to pay duty on the technical, rather than on the actual net weight. The saving which may result from either "breaking the tare" (as the act of including an article of a different classification for the purpose of taking the shipment out of the provisions of the tariff regarding a specified allowance for tare only is called), or arranging the shipment with a view to taking advantage of the larger official tare allowance, should be calculated in advance, before the cases are made up. Failure to do this, and the consequent added expense of more duty, does not make the importer favorably inclined towards further dealings with a firm who, by the exercise of a little good judgment, could have saved him money.

The dutiable value on which duty must be paid, is taken to be the usual wholesale value in the country from which the merchandise is imported, together with the cost of packing, value of receptacles, and other expenses connected with preparing the goods for shipment, up to the moment when they leave the factory or warehouse of the exporter; consular fees, freight and insurance are not included in the dutiable value.

By presidential decree of February 1, 1904, a surtax was imposed on most rates of duty in force. Some few items were not included in this surtax, on others the surtax was less than 20%, on most of them however it ranges between 20 to 30%. This surtax is always a stated percentage of the duty imposed by the tariff, and not a stated percentage of the value of the goods. Thus, two shipments of the value of $1,000.00 each, of which one is subject to an import duty of 20% ad valorem (of the value) and the other 30%, and both subject to a surtax of 20%, would in the one case be subject to a duty of $200.00 plus a surtax of $40.00, and in the other to a duty of $300.00, and a surtax of $60.00.

Articles which, by their nature or use, are composed of two or more materials or of different parts (as for instance, the handle of an implement and the implement itself, the glass and frame of a mirror) shall be dutiable on the entire weight as the component material of chief value. — In case of doubt as to the component material of chief value, the article shall be dutiable according to the most highly taxed component material.

The "First Provision" of the "Rules for the Application of the Tariff" provides elaborate rules for the classification of fabrics. The textile materials are arranged in four classes, and the rate of duty rises in accordance with these four classes, being lowest on fabrics made of cotton, higher on other vegetable fibre than cotton, still higher in the case of fabrics of wool, and highest on silk. As a general rule the component material subject to the highest rate, provided that it constitutes more than one-fifth of the total number of threads in warp and weft, determines the classification.

These rules have been very much simplified by the adoption of ad valorem duties on many fabrics since the "First Provision" of the "Rules for the Application of the Tariff" was drafted.

The provisions of the tariff exempting certain articles from duty and putting them on the free list, are, naturally, strictly enforced and in order to enjoy the benefits of this part of the tariff, it is up to the importer to prove that his merchandise comes within the provisions of the free list.

Since the introduction of ad valorem rates of duty, it has become possible to insert in the tariff so-called omnibus clauses to apply in the case of unenumerated articles which cannot readily be classified under any of the enumerated headings of the tariff. It is, nevertheless, always an open question whether an article which does not fall clearly within any tariff classification is subject to duty as an unenumerated article or as some specified article to which it may be assimilated. An advance interpretation, binding in respect to the importation to which it refers, but not necessarily a precedent to be invariably followed, may be obtained from the customs authorities upon submitting full description, accompanied by samples.

In order to determine the amount of duty to be paid on imports from the United States, it is necessary to ascertain, first, the rate imposed by the tariff of 1900 with any subsequent amendments; second, the percentage of increase provided by the decree of February 1, 1904; and, third, the percentage of reduction granted on imports from the United States under the provisions of the reciprocity treaty. If, for instance, an article was subject to a rate of duty of 20%, surtax of 25% and reduction in favor of United States products of 40%, then the compound rate paid by United States products would be $20\% + 5\% - 10\%$, i. e. 15% only, whereas the same article from another country would be subject to a rate of duty of 20% and a surtax of 5%, or a total of 25%.

That these preferential rates give the American manufacturer a decided advantage over his foreign competitors, is self-evident and borne out by the considerable increase in the ratio of imports from the United States since the treaty went into effect.

For a detailed and exhaustive study of the Cuban tariff, we refer the reader to Tariff Series No. 27 and 27-B, on the "Customs Tariff of Cuba", published by the Department of Commerce of the United States Government, and obtainable from the Superintendent of Documents, Government Printing Office, Washington, D. C., or from one of the branch offices of the Department of Commerce, Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce, in the larger cities of the United States. These two publications are so admirably arranged, that the author has, in the present article, considered it for the best interests of the reader to follow their arrangement, more or less, and even to quote parts of them.

RECIPROCITY TREATY BETWEEN CUBA AND THE UNITED STATES.

(Concluded, Dec. 11, 1902; ratifications exchanged; Mar. 31, 1903; approved by Congress, Dec. 17, 1903; in force, Dec. 27, 1903).

The President of the United States of America and the President of the Republic of Cuba, animated by the desire to strengthen the bonds of friendship between the two countries, and to facilitate their commercial intercourse by improving the conditions of trade between them, have resolved to enter into a convention for that purpose, and have appointed their respective plenipotentiaries, to wit:

The President of the United States of America, the Honorable General Tasker H. Bliss;

The President of the Republic of Cuba, the Honorable Carlos de Zaldo y Beurmann, Secretary of State and Justice, and the Honorable José M. García y Montes, Secretary of the Treasury;

Who, after an exchange of their full powers found to be in good and due form, have, in consideration of and in compensation for the respective concessions and engagements made by each to the other as hereinafter recited, agreed, and do hereby agree, upon the following articles for the regulation and government of their reciprocal trade, namely:

Article I.

During the term of this convention, all articles of merchandise being the product of the soil or industry of the United States which are now imported into the Republic of Cuba free of duty, and all articles of merchandise being the product of the soil or industry of the Republic of Cuba which are now imported into the United States free of duty, shall continue to be so admitted by the respective countries free of duty.

Article II.

During the term of this convention, all articles of merchandise not included in the foregoing Article I, and being the product of the soil or industry of the Republic of Cuba imported into the United States, shall be admitted at a reduction of twenty per centum of the rates of duty thereon as provided by the tariff act of the United States approved July 24, 1897, or as may be provided by any tariff law of the United States subsequently enacted.

Article III.

During the term of this convention, all articles of merchandise not included in the foregoing Article I and not hereinafter enumerated, being the product of the soil or industry of the United States, imported into the Republic of Cuba shall be admitted at a reduction of twenty per centum of the rates of duty thereon as now provided or as may hereafter be provided in the customs tariff of said Republic of Cuba.

Article IV.

During the term of this convention, the following articles of merchandise, as enumerated and described in the existing customs tariff of the Republic of Cuba, being the product of the soil or industry of the United States imported into Cuba, shall be admitted at the following respective reductions of the rates of duty thereon, as now provided or as may hereafter be provided in the customs tariff of the Republic of Cuba:

Schedule A.—To be admitted at a reduction of twenty-five (25) per centum: Machinery and apparatus of copper or its alloys, or machines and apparatus in which copper or its alloys enter as the component of chief value; cast iron, wrought iron, and steel, and manufactures thereof; articles of crystal and glass, except window glass; ships and water-borne vessels of all kinds, of iron or steel; whiskies and brandies; fish, salted, pickled, smoked, or marinated; fish or shellfish, preserved in oil or otherwise in tins; articles of pottery or earthenware now classified under paragraphs 21 and 22 of the customs tariff of the Republic of Cuba.

for tobacco or other purposes, and all the other papers (except paper for cigarettes, and excepting maps and charts), pasteboard and manufactures thereof, now classified under paragraphs 157 to 164, inclusive, of the customs tariff of the Republic of Cuba; common or ordinary soaps, now classified under paragraph 105, letters "a" and "b", of the customs tariff of the Republic of Cuba; vegetables, pickled or preserved in any manner; all wines, except those now classified under paragraph 279 (a) of the customs tariff of the Republic of Cuba.

Schedule C.— To be admitted at a reduction of forty (40) per centum: Manufactures of cotton, knitted, and all manufactures of cotton not included in the preceding schedules; cheese; fruits, preserved; paper pulp; perfumery and essences; articles of pottery and earthenware now classified under paragraph 20 of the customs tariff of the Republic of Cuba; porcelain; soaps, other than common, now classified under paragraph 105 of the customs tariff of the Republic of Cuba; umbrellas and parasols; dextrine and glucose; watches; wool and manufactures thereof; silk and manufactures thereof; rice; cattle.

Article V.

It is understood and agreed that the laws and regulations adopted, or that may be adopted, by the United States and by the Republic of Cuba, to protect their revenues and prevent fraud in the declarations and proofs that the articles of merchandise to which this convention may apply are the product or manufacture of the United States and the Republic of Cuba, respectively, shall not impose any additional charge or fees therefor on the articles imported, excepting the consular fees established, or which may be established, by either of the two countries for issuing shipping documents, which fees shall not be higher than those charged on the shipments of similar merchandise from any other nation whatsoever.

Article VI.

It is agreed that the tobacco, in any form, of the United States or of any of its insular possessions shall not enjoy the benefit of any concession or rebate of duty when imported into the Republic of Cuba.

Article VII.

It is agreed that similar articles of both countries shall receive equal treatment on their importation into the ports of the United States and of the Republic of Cuba, respectively.

Article VIII.

The rates of duty herein granted by the United States to the Republic of Cuba are and shall continue during the term of this convention preferential in respect to all like imports from other countries, and, in return for said preferential rates of duty granted to the Republic of Cuba by the United States, it is agreed that the concession herein granted on the part of the said Republic of Cuba to the products of the United States shall likewise be, and shall continue, during the term of this convention, preferential in respect to all like imports from other countries: Provided, That while this convention is in force no sugar imported from the Republic of Cuba, and being the product of the soil or industry of the Republic of Cuba, shall be admitted into the United States at a reduction of duty greater than twenty per centum of the rates of duty thereon as provided by the tariff act of the United States approved July 24, 1897; and no sugar, the product of any other foreign country, shall be admitted by treaty or convention into the United States, while this convention is in force, at a lower rate of duty than that provided by the tariff act of the United States approved July 24, 1897.

Article IX.

In order to maintain the mutual advantages granted in the present convention by the United States to the Republic of Cuba and by the Republic of Cuba to the United States, it is understood and agreed that any tax or charge that may be imposed by the national or local authorities of either of the two countries upon the articles of merchandise embraced in the provisions of this convention, subsequent to importation and prior to their entering into consumption in the respective countries, shall be imposed and collected without discrimination upon like articles whencesoever imported.

Article X.

It is hereby understood and agreed that in case of changes in the tariff of either country which deprive the other of the advantage which is represented by the percentages herein agreed upon, on the actual rates of the tariffs now in force, the country so deprived of this protection reserves the right to terminate its obligations under this convention after six months' notice to the other of its intention to arrest the operations thereof.

And it is further understood and agreed that if, at any time during the term of this convention, after the expiration of the first year, the protection herein granted to the products and manufactures of the United States on the basis of the actual rates of the tariff of the Republic of Cuba now in force, should appear to the Government of the said Republic to be excessive in view of a new tariff law that may be adopted by it after this convention becomes operative, then the said Republic of Cuba may reopen negotiations with a view to securing such modifications as may appear proper to both contracting parties.

Article XI.

The present convention shall be ratified by the appropriate authorities of the respective countries, and the ratifications shall be exchanged at Washing-imported into the United States of America, the previous declaration is not valid, since said declaration is only used for the shipments of articles which are the products "de la Industria" (of the Industry) or "del Suelo" (of the Soil) of the United States, and, therefore, the following declaration should be copied: "Declaramos que somos los vendedores de las mercancías relacionadas en la presente factura, y que son ciertos los precios y demás particulares que en ella se consignan." — (We declare that we are the sellers of the merchandise described in the present invoice, and that the prices and other particulars given therein are correct).

In case the Consular Invoice consists of several pages, each page should be numbered, and the above declaration written on the last page only, with sufficient space after the signature of the firm and member of same, for the Cuban Consul to place his official seal (say, about five or six inches).

The declaration of the manufacturer or seller as referred to above can be simplified by having a rubber stamp of the declaration made, and stamping same after the description, thus avoiding the work of constantly rewriting the declaration. The object of this declaration is to enable the Government of the Republic of Cuba to distinguish between products of the industry or the soil of the United States of America, so as to apply to them the preferential tariff existing between both republics. Inasmuch as goods thus imported from the United States are subject to a lower rate of duty than other goods, the value of this to the American exporter is readily apparent.

If the merchandise shipped be fabrics, the description of same in the Consular Invoice should specify the following details:

1. Nature of fibre (cotton, linen, wool, silk, etc.)
2. Kind of fabric (plain, smooth, twilled, damasked, and whether embroidered or not).
3. Bleached, half bleached, printed, dyed in the piece or colored.
4. Number of threads in a square of 6 millimeters ($\frac{1}{4}$ inch).
5. Length and width in meters and centimeters.
6. Weight of 100 square meters.
7. Price per unit, value of each kind and nature of same.

Having written and signed the declaration, the Consular Invoice is ready, as far as the shippér is concerned.

The following should then be done: First of all, it is necessary to obtain the Foreign Bill of Lading and the Insurance Policy from the Railroad Office and Insurance Company, respectively. The Railroad Company will demand the Shipper's Export Declaration properly executed, signed by the authorized member of the firm, and certified by a Notary Public or by the Collector of Customs. This document is required by the United States Government for its own use, and it is absolutely necessary to present same before the merchandise can leave this country. To execute this Shipper's Export Declaration, one only need to follow the instructions printed on the blank form.

Next, the original and four copies of the Consular Invoices, together with the original and one copy of the Foreign Bill of Lading, on shipments to any town in the Province of Habana, — or the original and three copies of the Consular Invoice, together with the original and a copy of the Foreign Bill of Lading on shipments for any other part of Cuba, should then be taken to the Cuban Consul. After placing the proper seals on the Invoices and making the proper entrance in his books, the Consul will return the Original Invoice and the Original Bill of Lading properly certified, and give a receipt for the fee that must be paid in accordance with the table of Consular fees.

This having been done, the Consular Invoice and Bill of Lading certified by the Consul, plus two copies of same should be sent to the consignee in Cuba, including in the same envelope the copy of the Insurance Policy, and the proper Invoice and letter of the firm making shipment. This procedure should be followed for ALL Provinces of the Island, Havana as well as the others.

Of the remainder of the copies, send one Invoice and a copy of the Bill of Lading to the office of the Steamship Company located at the port whence the goods leave this country, with a letter requesting them to kindly take charge of the shipment, advising them also that the documents have been properly certified by the Consul of Cuba, in case there is a Consul of Cuba in the city where the shipper is established.

In case there is no Cuban Consul in the city where the shipper is located, then as many sets of copies of the Consular Invoice as need be certified, should be sent to an agent who resides in the port whence the merchandise leaves for its destination, so that he may take said copies to the Cuban Consular Office which is situated at that port for certification, paying the corresponding Consular fees, and return them, and then proceed as stated above.

There remains one set of copies of the Invoice in Spanish, also of the Bill of Lading. These should be pinned to the original English Invoice and filed for reference.

MERCHANDISE SENT BY MAIL:

In case that the merchandise is sent by mail, that is to say, by Parcel Post, one should proceed in the same way as we have stated for shipments of merchandise by freight, the only difference being that Bill of Lading and Policy of Insurance are not necessary. Bill of Lading is not needed because one does

It is very important to bear in mind, that the Consular Invoice as well as the Bill of Lading properly certified by the Cuban Consul should be sent immediately to the consignee, since five days, counting from the day after the arrival of the steamer bringing the goods, are granted by the Customs Authorities of Cuba for presentation of the Consular documents, and after five days, the goods remain in the storage houses of the Custom House, subject to payment by the consignee of a very high storage charge, which additional unnecessary expense can be the cause of annoyance and arguments, and may, in some cases, even lead the importer to abandon the entire transaction, or will, at least, prejudice him against a house that puts him to such an unnecessary expense and annoyance.

The Consular Invoice should be written in Spanish, since, although it is true that the Cuban Consul will certify an Invoice written in English, the consignee then finds it necessary, before presenting it to the Customs Authorities in order to clear the goods, to have it translated into Spanish; very often he has not time to do so (on account of the expiration of the five days allowed for presentation of the Consular Invoice). The consignee has to pay for the translation, to which he generally objects, a thing which does not happen with the shipments of European firms with whom he has dealt and who send the documents properly made out in Spanish.

Instructions should be given to the Packing Department that, when packing merchandise for shipment to Cuba, a record should be made of the amount, weight and kind of goods shipped in each separate case or package, so that it is known what each case or package contains, as well as the gross and net weight of the contents of each case or package.

The above are mere generalities (which however must be borne in mind); now follows an explanation of the mode of procedure in making out a Consular Invoice.

Below is a table of the fees that must be paid in the Office of the Consulate of Cuba for certification of the Consular Invoice:

If the goods auctioned proceed from a wreck, the charges shall be one-half of the foregoing rates.

Credits and Collections.

It is quite outside the scope of this book to give complete instructions in the matter of International Credits and Collections, and it can be mentioned here only in the most elementary way for the benefit of the manufacturer who has never engaged in the export trade and is not familiar with the subject. ,

In general, payment is made under one of the plans, which are arranged below according to the degree of safety offered by each. We begin with the one which offers to the exporter the most security, and wind up with the one that offers him the least security for payment of the amounts due him:

1. Payment in advance.
2. Cash against letter of credit.
3. Sight draft with documents attached.
4. Time draft with documents attached.
5. Clean draft.
6. Open account.

Payment in advance can generally be exacted only by the manufacturer of specialties, or goods selling for small amounts only, or, when abnormal conditions cause a much heavier demand than the supply will cover, or when the purchaser's financial standing is not established, etc.

Cash against letter of credit means that the purchaser has made arrangements with a bank, generally in the country of the exporter, but sometimes also, especially in the case of large financial centers as London, etc., with a bank in the country of the importer, to the effect that the bank will honor the draft of the exporter up to a certain amount, provided certain conditions are fulfilled. These conditions generally consist in presenting within a specified time the documents showing that certain goods ordered by the purchaser have been shipped to him. This insures to the exporter the getting of his money immediately upon shipment, and generally means that the bank has no recourse on the exporter and it amounts to the same thing as if the purchaser himself handed the cash to the manufacturer as soon as the goods leave the factory or warehouse.

Sight draft with documents attached, means that the bills of lading, in-insurance certificates, and other documents whose possession confers the title to the goods, are attached to a draft drawn upon the purchaser payable "at sight." These documents with the draft are either turned in for collection or negotiated with a local bank, or a bank in the country of the purchaser, or sent to an agent or a branch house in the purchaser's locality. Having reached the purchaser's locality, the draft is presented to the purchaser for payment and upon the amount of same being paid, the documents conferring title to the shipment are turned over to him. In negotiating such a draft through his local bank, the manufacturer or exporter will immediately come in possession of the funds, the same as he does when he draws on a bank against a letter of credit as mentioned in the preceding paragraph. The main difference, however, between these two modes of payment, as far as the manufacturer is concerned, consists in the degree of responsibility for the shipment, i. e. whereas his responsibility ceases when payment is made to him against a letter of credit, and that money is his absolutely, — in the case of a sight draft with documents attached (even though negotiated by a bank in his own city) his responsibility does not cease until after the draft is paid by the purchaser, and should the purchaser refuse to honor the draft upon presentation to him, the loss occasioned through a forced sale of the goods, or through a reshipment, etc., must be borne by the manufacturer, who must also refund to his bank the amount paid him when the draft was negotiated. The amount paid against such a draft by the manufacturer's local bank will vary depending not only on the character of the goods as invoiced, but also on the responsibility of the manufacturer or seller, and on any other considerations which affect the degree of risk which the bank is running of getting its money back in case the draft is not paid upon presentation. Thus there will be encountered cases, where the full, or almost full amount of the draft will be advanced by the bank who negotiates the draft, in other cases only a partial amount.

A draft drawn at 30, 60, 90 days or more days after sight, a time draft with documents attached, means that upon arrival at its destination, the draft is presented for acceptance by the purchaser, and upon being accepted by him, the documents are generally turned over to him. When the draft becomes due and is collected, the proceeds are then remitted either directly to the exporter, or, if he has negotiated the draft with his local bank, or another bank in his country, the proceeds are remitted to that bank. In this case the manufacturer or seller of the goods takes not only the risks incidental to the transaction explained in the preceding paragraph, but also the risk of obtaining his money when the draft is due. In determining the amount of such a draft, there must not only be taken into consideration the cash price of the goods and the amount of shipping charges, insurance charges, etc. advanced, but to this there must be added the interest on the amount for the time it takes the draft to get to the purchaser's locality, the number of days it has to run before payment is due, and the number of days it takes for the proceeds of the draft to reach the locality of the seller. Instead of being drawn at a certain number of days after sight, a draft may be drawn at a certain number of days after date, which, however, is rarely done.

A "clean draft" is drawn, where the documents are sent to the purchaser without the draft attached, and title to the goods, or at least possession of same, is transferred to the purchaser independently of the acceptance or payment of the draft.

Selling in "open account" exists where the seller sends the goods to the purchaser without drawing on him immediately, merely charging his account with the amount in much the same manner as sending goods on "open credit" to anyone in his own country. This is, of course, the most risky mode of procedure, and entails even more of a risk than a "clean draft" inasmuch as a purchaser, may, in case he finds himself short of money, prefer to pay drafts coming due at a certain date, rather than "open accounts" in order to keep his credit good with his local bank who presents the drafts for payment.

As to which one of the modes of collection mentioned above to follow, remains a matter which must be decided in accordance with the circumstances of each case, the custom in a certain country, or in a certain line of goods or manufactures, etc. As to "open credit", although it is naturally easier to enforce payment in nearby countries, such as Cuba, Canada, the West Indies, and under normal conditions in Mexico, etc., it should nevertheless be borne in mind that the granting of "open credit" may result very disastrously for the manufacturer or seller, unless he has through personal experience or the most reliable information satisfied himself as to the reliability and integrity of the purchaser.

If the manufacturer or seller has had no experience in this line, he should get assistance in determining his course, from reliable banking houses, mercantile agencies, reliable references furnished by the purchaser etc. The publishers of this book are at all times willing to render any such assistance as their rich experience enables them to furnish.

For more detailed information in regard to Credits and Collections we refer to works published on the subject, and are, upon request, cheerfully willing to recommend such works as are, in our opinion, most suitable for a certain enterprise.

In this connection it is to be noted that the matter of obtaining reliable credit information on customers in Latin American countries has been steadily growing in importance and is now receiving a good deal of attention.

Considering the proximity of the Island of Cuba, and the total volume of business between Cuba and the United States, it is easily understood why credit information on Cuban customers is, in most cases, more readily obtainable and much more reliable than credit information on customers in most of the other Latin American Countries. Many banks in the United States, as well as Credit Associations, and mercantile agencies are in a position to furnish reliable information on a Cuban importer or the information may be obtained with very little loss of time from Cuban Banks. In this connection, it is worthy of notice that the National City Bank of New York maintains a branch office in Havana.

From personal observation the author of the present volume takes pleasure in saying that credit losses in Cuba are, as a rule, less than even in the United States. This applies to practically all of Latin America; as an authority whose verdict in this matter carries weight, the author takes the liberty to quote the "Chicago Association of Credit Men"; in a pamphlet called "Foreign Trade Suggestions by the Chicago Association of Credit Men — Latin America, 1916" the Foreign Credits Committee of that Association says: "Losses in Latin America we find are less than in the United States."

Information in regard to Mails.

LETTERS.

It is sufficient to pay two cents (2c) per ounce on each letter sent to the Republic of Cuba.

In general, everything that is desired to be sent as first class matter requires two cents (2c) per ounce.

PRINTED MATTER AND CIRCULARS.

Everything that is desired to be sent as printed matter or circulars requires one cent (1c) for each two (2) ounces, or fraction thereof. It is both interesting and useful to note that printed circulars sent through the mails which are the same in form and contents, may be signed with pen and ink without being subject to the first-class rate.

NEWSPAPERS.

One cent (1c) for four (4) ounces is the charge on newspapers, provided that complete copies are sent.

REGISTERED MAIL.

All registered mail is subject to an extra charge of ten cents (10c). When sending a registered letter or package, it is always best to request a return receipt, so as to be certain that the addressee has received the letter or package, and cannot put up the excuse of not having received it. Unless requested at the time of mailing, no return receipt is furnished now by the postal authorities.

PARCEL POST.

The use of the Parcel Post Service with the Republic of Cuba is as convenient and satisfactory as within the United States of America.

It is only necessary to observe the following regulations:

Weight: Not to exceed four (4) pounds and six (6) ounces.

Size: Should not exceed eighty-four (84) inches combined in length and girth.

Insurance: Cannot be insured.

Registry: Can be registered for ten cents (10c) extra.

Postage: Twelve cents (12c) per pound or fraction thereof.

SAMPLES.

When samples are sent to the Republic of Cuba, one must ascertain the weight of each package of samples not to exceed twelve (12) ounces as the maximum limit, paying two cents (2c) for four (4) ounces or less, and one cent (1c) for each additional two ounces.

PROHIBITED MATTER.

In regard to this particular, the same laws prevail as in the United States of North America, that is to say, it is prohibited to send poisons, inflammable material and intoxicating matter, nor can oily and fatty substances be sent by Parcel Post to Cuba, except as samples. None of the articles prohibited by the Cuban tariff, can, of course, be imported by mail or otherwise. In order to be sure of one's ground, it is advisable to consult the local Post Master in regard to legislation covering this particular.

MONEY ORDERS.

Of immense advantage to the firm, that does a direct mail order business with the consumer in articles that are not readily obtained by the Cuban in his own stores, remains the splendid money order arrangement between the United States and Cuba. Direct money orders from all places, designated as money order offices in the list below, can be obtained on any money order office in the United States. We know from personal observation that many mail order concerns in the United States, are, as a result of these money order facilities, reaping a rich harvest of Cuban dollars, and the field has, in our opinion, hardly been scratched yet.

SAMPLES.

21. (1) Samples of merchandise must conform to the following conditions: must be placed in bags, boxes, or removable envelopes in such a manner as to admit of easy inspection. They must not have any salable value, nor bear any manuscript, other than the name or the social position of the sender, the address of the addressee, a manufacturer's or trade mark, numbers, prices and indications relating to the weight, size and quantity to be disposed of, and words which are necessary to precisely indicate the origin and nature of the merchandise. Packages of samples must not exceed 350 grams (12 ounces) in weight, or the following dimensions: — 30 centimeters (12 inches) in length, 20 centimeters (8 inches) in breadth, and 10 centimeters (4 inches) in depth; except that when in the form of a roll, a package of samples may measure not to exceed 30 centimeters (12 inches) in length, and 15 centimeters (6 inches) in diameter. For the postage rate, see section 13, page 44. Articles sent for sale, in execution of an order, or as gifts, however small the quantity may be. are not admissible at the sample rate and conditions stated in section 13.

Many articles sent in the mails to foreign countries as samples of merchandise prove to be dutiable on delivery, and are consequently returned to origin. Particular care should be given in the dispatch of samples, as articles which have any salable or commercial value are prohibited under this classification.

(2) Articles of glass, liquids, oils, fatty substances, dry powders, as well as live bees, are admitted to the mails as "samples" provided they are packed in the following manner:

(a) Articles of glass must be packed solidly in boxes of metal or wood in a way to prevent all damage to other articles or the employees.

(b) Liquids, oils and substances easily liquefiable must be enclosed in glass bottles hermetically sealed. Each bottle must be placed in a wooden box filled with spongy material sufficient to absorb the liquid in case the bottle should be broken. Finally, the box itself must be enclosed in a case of metal or wood with a screw top, or of strong and thick leather. If wooden blocks perforated to contain several vials or wooden mailing cases are used, measuring at least one-tenth of an inch in the thinnest part, lined with a sufficient absorbing material and furnished with a lid, the blocks need not be enclosed in a second case.

(c) Fatty substances, such as ointments, soft soaps, resins, etc., must be enclosed in an inner cover (box, linen bag, parchment, etc.), which must be placed in a second box of wood, metal or strong, thick leather.

(d) Dry powders must be placed; if coloring—in bags of leather, gummed cloth or strong oiled paper; and if not coloring, in boxes of metal, wood or cardboard, which bags or boxes must be enclosed in a cloth or parchment bag.

(e) Live bees must be enclosed in boxes which avoid all danger and permit examination of the contents.

(3) Articles treated as samples.—Single keys, fresh cut flowers, (but not live plants), tubes of serum and pathological objects rendered inoffensive by their mode of preparation and packing; specimens of natural history, such as dried or preserved animals and plants, geological specimens, etc., are admitted to the mails at the postage rate and under the conditions applicable to "samples", provided they are not sent for sale, in execution of an order or as a gift and that their packing conforms to the general conditions prescribed for samples.

PARCEL POST CONVENTION BETWEEN THE UNITED STATES AND CHINA.

A parcel post convention having been concluded between the United States and China to take effect August 1, 1916, parcel post packages for China will be admitted on and after that date to the parcel post mails for that country made up in and dispatched from this country.

Parcel post packages exchanged between the United States and China must not weigh more than 11 pounds (5 kilograms), or measure more than 3 feet 6 inches in length, and 6 feet in length and girth combined, and, in the case of parcels for or from non-steam-served places in China, must not exceed 25 cubic decimeters (one cubic foot) in volume. A list of the only places in China to parcels for which the limitation of one cubic foot in volume does not apply is printed hereunder.

Postage must be paid in full at the following rates, viz: In the United States on parcels for China — 12 cents per pound or fraction of a pound; and in China on parcels for the United States — 35 cents, Chinese currency, per pound, or fraction of a pound, except that on parcels for or from non-steam-served places in China an additional Chinese domestic parcel postage may be levied and collected by the Chinese service.

Parcel post packages for China may be registered.

The Parcel Post Regulations on pages 47 to 49 and 147 and 148 of the Postal Guide for July, 1916, apply to parcel post packages for or from China.

Parcel post mails for China will be made up, for the present, at the post offices of San Francisco, Seattle and Honolulu.

Postmasters will cause due notice of the foregoing to be taken at their offices and the widest possible publicity to be given thereto.

Parcels addressed for delivery at places not included in the above list can not be accepted unless the sender indicates exactly, on the address of the parcel as well as on the customs declaration accompanying it, the parcel post office where the parcel is to be held for delivery. The addressee will be notified, by the receiving office, of the arrival of the parcel, of which he must take delivery in person or cause delivery of the same to be taken by a third party. Accordingly, parcels addressed for delivery at places not included in the list can be transported only as far as the Greek parcel post office indicated by the sender.

POSTAL GUIDE — JULY, 1916.

2. Merchandise. Packages of merchandise that weigh over four ounces and not over four pounds, six ounces, may be sent to Canada, Cuba, Mexico, and the Republic of Panama, at the eighth zone rate of postage (twelve cents for each pound or fraction thereof). Parcels for Mexico and the Republic of Panama must be accompanied by customs declarations regardless of their weight.

Packages of merchandise weighing not more than four ounces, may be mailed, at the postage rate of one cent for each ounce or fraction of an ounce, to Canada, Cuba, Mexico, and the Republic of Panama. Customs declarations are required on such parcels of merchandise of four ounces or less, to Mexico and the Republic of Panama.

Packages of merchandise cannot be insured or sent C. O. D., but may be registered for Canada, Cuba, Mexico, and the Republic of Panama.

Mailable merchandise for Mexico and the Republic of Panama, at the option of the sender, may also be sent by international parcel post if it conforms to the requirements.

COMMERCIAL PAPERS.

20. (a) Commercial papers must be under band or in an open envelope. The maximum weight of commercial papers is fixed at 2 kilograms (4 pounds, 6 ounces), and the maximum size at 45 centimeters (18 inches), except when put up in rolls, the dimensions of which do not exceed 75 centimeters (30 inches) in length and 10 centimeters (4 inches) in diameter. For the postage rate, see section 13, page 44. In dispatching packages of commercial papers post offices and railway post offices must enclose them invariably in the pouches containing letters. In order that packages of commercial papers may be readily identified as such, each should be marked on the cover or wrapper "Commercial papers".

(b) The following are considered as commercial papers, viz: All instruments or documents written or drawn wholly or partly by hand, which have not the character of an actual and personal correspondence, such as old letters and postal cards which have fulfilled their original object, papers of legal procedure, deeds of all kinds drawn up by public functionaries, way- bills or bills of lading invoices, the various documents of insurance companies, copies of or extracts from deeds under private signature, written on stamped or unstamped paper, scores or sheets of manuscript music, manuscript for publication, forwarded separately, original and corrected tasks of pupils, excluding all comment on the work etc.

(c) Manuscript sermons and packages of old letters or post cards may be sent by mail to foreign countries at the rate, and under the conditions, applicable to "commercial papers" in Postal Union mails. "Old letters" or "old post cards" or letters which have served the purpose for which they were originally written and not those which have been withheld from mailing beyond the dates they bear.

Cable Rules.

THE importance of the cable service in the development of international commerce is becoming from day to day more apparent. With a view to increasing the usefulness of this book beyond the scope which might be inferred from its title, we bring herewith not only specific and important information regarding the exchange of cablegrams between this country and Cuba, but have also copied to a liberal extent the general cable rules and rates which the Western Union Telegraph Company have so kindly furnished us. We take advantage of this opportunity to thank Mr. E. F. Roe, whose never tiring kindness has enabled us to fill this part of the book with valuable and accurate information. The latest changes in rates, rules and regulations concerning the cable service can be obtained from the records of the branch offices of the Telegraph Companies.

RULES APPLICABLE TO FULL RATE CABLEGRAMS.

For conditions other than the following, under which full rate cable messages are accepted for transmission, see the printed headings of the message forms.

MESSAGES MUST BE PREPAID.

Every message must be prepaid, unless otherwise specially authorized, and all words in the address, text and signature must be counted and charged for. No charge is made for the transmission of the name of the originating office.

ADDRESSES.

In the address of any message, the name of the office of destination, the name of the country and the name of the territorial subdivision (if any) of the country of destination are each counted as one word, no matter how many letters are employed.

The address of every message must consist of at least two words, the first indicating the name of the receiver and the second the name of the office of destination.

The sender is responsible for an incorrect or insufficient address. Corrections and alterations can only be made by a paid service message.

Messages addressed to the care of a registered address are accepted only at the risk of the sender unless the words "care" or "care of", or their equialent, be placed between the addressee's name, and the registered address; thus a message for "Meyer, Berlin," to be delivered to the registered address "Dervish, Berlin," should be addressed "Meyer, care (or 'care of') Dervish, Berlin."

If an indication of any particular route be given by the sender and its transmission is considered necessary by the company, it will be forwarded free. Such indication, when given, must be transmitted immediately after the address, that is, as a part of the address, and before the text of the message.

Messages destined for places beyond the lines of telegraph must contain the name of the place from which they are to be posted or otherwise delivered. The requisite instructions in such cases must be inserted as a part of the address, and must be paid for.

PLAIN LANGUAGE MESSAGES.

Plain language messages (i. e., neither Code nor Cipher) may be written in any language that can be expressed in Roman letters. In such messages each word of fifteen letters or less is counted as a word, and words of over fifteen letters are counted at the rate of fifteen letters or fractions of fifteen letters to a word.

CODE MESSAGES.

Code messages may contain words belonging to one or more of the following languages: English, French, German, Italian, Dutch, Portuguese, Spanish and Latin. The use of words of other languages is not allowed. Code messages may also contain artificial words — that is, groups of letters so combined as to be pronounceable in at least one of the eight admitted languages. In code messages each code word (whether genuine or artificial) of ten letters or less is counted as a word, and no code word of more than ten letters can be accepted. If any words in plain language, and of more than ten letters each, are used in code messages, they should be counted at the rate of ten letters or fraction of ten letters to a word.

CIPHER MESSAGES.

In cipher messages, which may be composed of groups of figures or of groups of letters, the groups are counted at the rate of five figures or letters, or fraction thereof, to a word. Words in plain language inserted in such messages are counted as in plain language messages.

COUNTING OF WORDS, ETC.

When the letters "ch" come together in the spelling of a dictionary word, they are counted as one letter. In artificial words the combination is counted as two letters.

Inverted commas, the two signs of the parenthesis and each separate figure, letter, underline or character will be counted as one word.

Signs of punctuation, hyphens and apostrophes are not counted or sent except upon formal demand of the sender, in which case they will be charged for as one word each.

Groups of figures will be counted and charged for at the rate of five figures, or fraction thereof, as one word. Decimal points and commas, used in the formation of numbers, also bars of division and letters added to figures to form ordinal numbers, are to be counted as figures and charged for at the rate of five figures, or fraction thereof, as one word.

Words joined by a hyphen or separated by an apostrophe are counted as so many separate words.

Abbreviated and misspelled words and illegitimate compound words and words combined in a manner contrary to the usages of any of the right authorized languages, are inadmissible.

The following examples will determine the interpretation of the rules to be followed in counting:

REPETITIONS.

At the time of filing a message the sender may order it repeated, upon payment of a quarter of the full rate in addition to the ordinary tolls, in which case the various relay offices en route repeat it to each other as it passes. The words "REPETITION PAID", or the indication "T. C.", must be inserted immediately after the address; that is, as a part of the address and before the text, and must be charged for; and in addition to this, the words "REPEAT BACK" must be included in the check, but will not be charged for. Such messages must be carefully repeated back from each relay through which they pass. The indication "T. C." counts as one word.

If repetition of a doubtful word or words be requested by the addressee of a message, the same may be procured by free service message to the office at which the message reached our lines, or to the CABLE DEPARTMENT, New York. In such service message the doubtful word or words as received must be given for comparison with the Cable office copy.

Every message exchanged between two telegraph offices to rectify a mistake of the sender will be charged for at full rates.

ACKNOWLEDGMENT OF RECEIPT.

The sender may request that advice of the date and time at which his message is delivered to the addressee, or when posted to destination the date and time handed to the Post Office, be transmitted to him by telegraph or Postal Card. The words "ACKNOWLEDGMENT PAID", or the indication "P. C.", if notice is to be given by telegraph, or "P. C. P.", if notice is to be given by Postal Card, besides being transmitted in the check free, must be inserted immediately after the address, and must be charged for. The indications "P. C." and "P. C. P." count each as one word.

The charge for a telegraphic "acknowledgment of receipt" is equal to that for a message of five words to same destination by same route.

PREPAID REPLIES.

The sender of a message may pay for a reply. The indication "R. P." (meaning Reply Paid), together with the number of words prepaid, must be inserted immediately before the address, that is, as a part of the address, and must be charged for. The indication "R. P. 5", "R. P. 10", "R. P. 14", etc., counts as one word.

When accepting a message for which a reply has been prepaid, the originating office must collect, in addition to the charges therefor, the full charges for the reply as indicated.

The sender of such a message should understand that the tolls paid for the reply is not a deposit, but is practically a remittance to his correspondent, to whom the foreign telegraph administrations deliver with the message a voucher specifying the amount and number of words paid for, which voucher entitles him to send free of charge, within the limits of the amount prepaid, a telegram to any destination whatever, and from any office of the administration whose office issued the voucher. To recover the amount paid for a prepaid reply, when no such reply is received, the sender must arrange with his correspondent to return the aforesaid voucher to the office of issue, with the information that no reply has been or will be sent, and with the request that the amount named therein be returned to the sender. The request for refund must be in the hands of the administration of destination within three months from the date of issue of the voucher. Otherwise the claim will not be entertained by the administration concerned.

Replies from foreign countries to R. P. messages originating in the United States are always received checked "paid", as foreign administrations treat them not as collect replies but as paid messages. R. P. charges can be refunded only when authorized as per section on "Refunds."

When an answer to a Reply Paid message from abroad is offered it will be forwarded checked "Collect reply", with proper reference to the particular message to which it is an answer. Should the reply contain more than the number of words prepaid, the sender of the answer must pay for the excess.

Upon the receipt of a message to which a reply has been prepaid, the delivery clerk will write under the message, before delivery, the words "Reply of..... words paid for."

NON-DELIVERY.

When a message cannot be delivered a report of non-delivery must be made by a service message to Cable Department, New York, or to the office at which the message reached our lines. Such report of non-delivery must give the address of the message as received, and state the reason for non-delivery. In case a message is delivered to an address differing from the address as received, or if a message which has been reported undelivered should subsequently be delivered, the facts must be reported as above.

REFUNDS.

No claim will be entertained for refund of tolls on messages exchanged directly between receivers and senders, to obtain corrections.

Claims for refund of amounts deposited for replies or for balances of amounts, in cases where the number of words in the reply is less than the number prepaid, and all complaints respecting irregularity in the transmission or delivery of messages, must be referred to the Manager of the Cable Bureau at New York. Claims of non-delivery must be accompanied by declaration in writing, from the office of destination or from the addressee, to the effect that the message has not been delivered; and in the case of delay, omission or mutilation, by the copy actually delivered to the addressee.

No refund will be made unless under instructions from the Manager of the Cable Bureau at New York.

Every claim should be made within sixty days of the date of the message, under penalty of rejection.

DEFERRED CABLEGRAMS.

Deferred messages are subject to transmission at the convenience of the company when the cables are free of full-paid traffic. They must bear the prefix LCO (language country of origin), LCD (language country of destination) or LCF (language country French), WRITTEN BEFORE THE ADDRESS, which indication must be counted and charged for.

Messages taken at Deferred Rates must be written in plain language of the country of origin or destination, or they may be written in French as a universal language. The use of more than one language in the same message is not permitted, and code words and arbitrary trade terms are excluded, although code addresses may be employed.

Numbers, except in addresses, must be written in words spelled out.

Except as above the regular rules for the counting and charging of cable messages, and the general conditions appertaining to the cable service, apply to Deferred cables.

The tariff on Deferred cablegrams is one-half the regular rates, except that on messages destined to points in Great Britain and Ireland it is 3 cents per word less than half regular rates. From points having a 25 cents tariff to London the deferred rate to Great Britain and Ireland is 9 cents per word.

A reply to a Deferred plain-language message may be prepaid, but the instruction must be expressed in terms of full rates. The indication RP, including the number of words paid for at full rates, should be counted and charged for as one word.

The Deferred cable service at the date of publication is in operation with:

EUROPEAN AND CUBAN CABLE LETTERS.

This form of service is predicated upon the use of cable facilities at times when they would otherwise be unemployed, and is designed primarily for a class of plain-language business and social communications which should not be subjected to the oversea mail's delay, but are not of sufficient urgency and importance to warrant payment of full cable tolls on the same.

Unlike the Regular Full Rate Fast Service and the Deferred Service, which are on a word basis, Cable Letter tolls are based on an initial minimum charge covering a given number of words, plus added charges for excess words. The messages themselves are subject to transmission at the company's convenience and have a fixed time of delivery. Eastbound European Cable Letters prefixed CLT are delivered at noon the following day. Westbound European Cable Letters are deliverable during the morning of the following day. Cuban Cable Letters are deliverable within 24 hours after filing. At date of publication direct Cable Letter Service is in operation only to Great Britain and Ireland, Holland, Belgium and Cuba. Cable Letters for European countries other than those mentioned may be accepted at the London rate for mail delivery from that point.

Cable Letters must be written in plain language of the country of origin, or the language of the country of destination may be employed if through Cable Letter service is in force therewith. Code language is not admissible, although code addresses may be used. The use of more than one language in the same message is not permitted.

London, Liverpool and Havana Cable Letters and Cable Letters intended for telegraphic delivery elsewhere in Great Britain and Ireland, or in Holland, Belgium or Cuba, will be prefixed CLT. Cable Letters for mail delivery beyond London or Havana will be prefixed CLP (Cable Letter Posted). These prefixes must be written immediately before the address and count as one word and are charged for.

Except as above, the regular rules for the counting and charging of cable messages and the general conditions appertaining to the cable service apply to Cable Letters.

A reply to a Cable Letter may be prepaid, but the instruction must be expressed in terms of full rates. For example: If the sender of a Cable Letter wishes to prepay a Cable Letter reply of 13 words at the 75 cents rate, the instructions to be written before the name and address should be RP3. The indication RP, including the number of words paid for at full rates, should be counted and charged for as one word.

EUROPEAN AND SOUTH AMERICAN WEEK-END LETTERS.

These messages differ from Cable Letters only in the increased number of words included in the minimum charge, and in the time of delivery.

The minimum number of words charged for is 25, including the necessary prefix, WLT for London, Liverpool and South American messages and for messages intended for telegraphic delivery elsewhere in Great Britain and Ireland or in Holland and Belgium, and WLP for European messages to be mailed beyond London.

Week-End Letters may be filed at any time up to midnight, Saturday, and are due for delivery the following Monday morning.

Week-End Letters must be written in plain language of the country of origin, or the language of the country of destination may be employed if through Week-End Letter service is in force therewith. Code language is not admissible, although code addresses may be used. The use of more than one language in the same message is not permitted.

At the date of publication direct Week-End Letter service is in operation only to Great Britain and Ireland, Holland, Belgium, the Argentine Republic, Chili and Peru. Week-End Letters for European countries other than those mentioned may be accepted at the London rate for mail delivery from that point.

Except as above the regular rules for the counting and charging of cable messages, and the general conditions appertaining to the cable service, apply to Week-End Letters.

A reply to a Week-End Letter may be prepaid, but as in the case of Cable Letters, the instructions must be expressed in terms of full rates. The indication RP, including the number of words paid for at full rates, should be counted and charged for as one word.

TRANS-OCEAN WIRELESS SERVICE.

Messages for points in Great Britain and Ireland, offered for wireless trans-ocean transmission by patrons of the Marconi Wireless Telegraph Company, may be accepted subject to all the rules for counting and the general conditions applicable to cable messages, and at the rates published in following table: Such trans-ocean wireless messages should preferably be written on the special "Marconigram" blanks supplied for that purpose, and they must in all cases be prefixed "Marconi." This prefix must be transmitted, but not counted or charged for.

Wireless letters and week-end letters may be accepted for Honolulu on the same conditions of count and service and with the same prefixes as cable and week-end letters. The prefix "Marconi" is not necessary on wireless letters to Honolulu.

All trans-Atlantic wireless messages must be prepaid.

Paid-Here trans-ocean wireless messages, destined to points in Great Britain and Ireland, and wireless letters and week-end letters to Honolulu, should be accounted for in the same manner as cable business, the revenue to be included with Cable Tolls on monthly Form 4 or similar report provided.

The same provision for prepaid replies to trans-ocean wireless messages may be made as for prepaid replies to cablegrams, but in the case of wireless trans-ocean messages the amount for the prepaid reply must be expressed in terms of the full wireless rate instead of the full cable rate.

Upon receipt of a trans-ocean wireless message to which a reply has been prepaid the delivery clerk will write under the message, before delivery, the words: "Reply to the value of.....paid for" and will arrive at the amount expressed as prepaid by calculating the tolls at full wireless rate on the number of words in the RP indication.

This trans-ocean wireless service must not be confused with the wireless service to and from ships at sea.

RADIO MESSAGES TO AND FROM SHIPS AT SEA.

Messages for wireless transmission to ships at sea may be accepted via any of the coastal stations published in the accompanying lists. All such messages must be prepaid except such as are covered by next to last paragraph of these instructions.

The senders of ship radio messages must write in the address, in addition to the name of the addressee, the name of the ship and of the coastal station through which the same shall be reached. Employees will assist senders, without responsibility for the correctness of the information, in determining by means of sailing lists supplied by the Wireless Companies the proper coastal station to be employed. In general, it may be said that trans-Atlantic steamers may be communicated with before arrival or after departure via coastal stations as follows:

New York Trans-Atlantic Steamers:

Sea Gate, N. Y.	4 hours
Sagaponack, N. Y.	10 "
Siasconsett, Mass.	24 "
Cape Sable or Sable Island, N. S.	36 "
Cape Race, N. F.	50 "

Of the foregoing stations only the first three should be used for vessels bound to or from the Mediterranean. These stations however, may be used for other vessels.

Boston Trans-Atlantic Steamers:

Boston, Mass.	12 hours

(Only the above station may be used for outward-bound Mediterranean vessels. For inward-bound Mediterranean boats Cape Sable or Sable Island stations may also be used).

Patents and Trade Marks.

a) PATENTS.

THE formalities to be observed in applying for a patent on an invention in the Republic of Cuba are of two classes, depending on whether the article has been patented in the United States of America, or whether it has not been so patented. — In the former case, power of attorney must be given to an attorney practicing in the Island of Cuba, and this power of attorney must be certified by a Notary Public, whose signature must be certified by the Clerk of the respective Circuit Court, and by the Cuban Consul.

This power of attorney must be accompanied by a certified copy of the patent issued by the Government of the United States of America. The charge for this certified copy is 80 cents.

Where application is made in Cuba for a patent on an invention, which is not patented in the United States, the cost of the patent varies according to the complexity of the patent, i. e., according to the amount of work necessary in preparing the corresponding designs and drawings.

Upon completion of the necessary drawings and designs, the same procedure is followed as in applying for a patent on an article which is already patented in the United States, with the exception of obtaining a certified copy of the corresponding United States patent.

The Republic of Cuba issues patents that are good for a term of fifteen years, and cannot be renewed or extended thereafter.

The government fees for issuing a patent amount to $35.00. The fees of the attorney for presenting and prosecuting a patent application vary, the minimum being in all probability about $15.00.

b) TRADE MARKS.

In considering the matter of Trade Marks in Cuba, as well as other Latin American countries, it is of the utmost importance to bear in mind that whereas, in the United States the property right in a trade mark can only be acquired by one who uses same, in Latin America anyone can obtain the property right in a trade mark by simply registering it.

This fact has enabled trade-mark pirates in these countries to register trade marks of foreign origin, and exacting from the originator of the trade mark payment for the permission to use the trade mark on the corresponding goods sold in these countries. The registration of a trade mark by the originator of same in Latin American countries should, therefore, be effected at the earliest possible moment.

In most of the Latin American countries there exists a distinction between the ordinary trade mark, or manufacturer's mark (marca de fabrica), which serves to designate the products of a particular factory or manufacturing concern; and the dealer's mark (marca comercial), which serves to distinguish articles handled by a particular dealer or commercial enterprise.

The application for a trade mark must show the name, residence and occupation of the applicant, mark, class of mark (whether of commerce or manufacture), and articles to be marked; fifteen (15) copies of the mark should be submitted; three of these copies should have the description written on the back. Foreigners must accompany their application by a certificate of registration of the mark abroad, and by a power of attorney, legalized by a Cuban Consul. One mark may be registered for several articles, but for several marks or variations of the same mark as many fees must be paid. A registered trade mark is required to be used on articles of gold and silver and pharmaceutical supplies, and all trade marks used must be registered.

The life of a trade mark in Cuba is fifteen years, but, unlike a patent, it can be renewed.

The government fee for registration of a trade mark is $12.50, and the same fee is exacted for a renewal. The fees charged by attorneys for presenting and prosecuting an application for a trade mark, are ordinarily somewhat lower than the fees for prosecuting a patent claim.

Steamship Lines Operating between the United States and Latin America.

ALTHOUGH this book only refers to the Island of Cuba, the publishers have deemed it advisable to insert a complete list of steamship lines operating between this country and Latin America, inasmuch as many of these lines touch a Cuban port and then proceed to Central or South America.

The publishers desire to call attention to the real value of the list, as it is important to know the names of different Steamship Lines, the ports of departure, ports of destination, and the intermediate ports they touch, address of the Agents at the respective ports, and to have a general idea as to the days of sailing, number of weekly or monthly steamers; the days of sailing and number of weekly or monthly steamers, are subject to alteration.

The railroad from Santiago de Cuba in the Eastern part of the Island to Pinar del Rio in the Western part is composed of the following parts:

First Division: From Santiago de Cuba, Province of Oriente to Santa Clara, Province of Santa Clara. This section is called "Cuban Co.", formed by American and Cuban stockholders. Has principal repair shops in Camaguey.

Second Division: From Santa Clara, Province of Santa Clara to Havana, the capital of the Island, Province of Havana. This division is called "Ferrocarriles Unidos de la Habana" (United Railways of Havana). This is an English Company, and has repair shops in Havana.

Third Division: From Havana, Province of Havana to Pinar del Rio, Province of Pinar del Rio. This section is called "Ferrocarril del Oeste de la Habana" (Western Railway of Havana). This is an English Company, and has its repair shops in Havana.

Fourth Division: From Cienfuegos, Province of Santa Clara to Sagua la Grande, Province of Santa Clara. This is called "Ferrocarril Central de Sagua la Grande" (Central Railway of Sagua la Grande). List of Periodicals in Latin America.

IT IS, in my opinion, unnecessary for me to dwell to any great extent upon the importance of newspapers as one of the best, if not the best, means of pushing the propaganda which is the backbone of a successful selling campaign of most articles, especially such as are not to be classed as staple merchandise, pure and simple. It should be evident to even the most elementary student of the requirements of an export sales campaign, that the proper choice of advertising media is just as important as the make-up of the advertisement and its construction with regard to the special characteristics, needs and probable buying tendencies of the population of a country in which one aims to expand his trade. Too much importance cannot be placed upon the rendering of an advertisement in the language of a country in such a way that the idiomatic peculiarities of that language should be employed so as to convey your message in plain, every-day language, instead of in highly academic and studied classic language.

Rates charged for advertising space, circulation of a newspaper, and all other important details can be obtained by writing to the publisher of same, or the publishers of this book are in a position to furnish a good deal of such information and will cheerfully do so upon request.

In presenting in the following pages a list of periodicals in South and Central America and the West Indies, the author feels that he fills a long-felt want.

The author does not claim that this list is complete, exact and up-to-date in every respect, for due to the scarcity and high price of paper, coupled with economic conditions in the different countries for the last two years, the publication of periodicals is being greatly interfered with, so that some of the smaller publications appear rather irregularly at times, and others are suspending publication altogether. Until this unfortunate situation will have disappeared, it is next to impossible to publish a complete list of South and Central American newspapers that would not be subject to considerable changes within a short time. This list, however, will furnish the exporter an idea of the newspaper situation during normal times.

In many places the circulation of the newspaper in this book has been altogether omitted, due to the difficulty of obtaining reliable information, and to the abnormal changes in the circulation which have been taking place for the last two years.

With the exception of Brazil where Portuguese is spoken, the publications mentioned in this list are Spanish, unless otherwise specified.

OFFICE OF "DIARIO DE LA MARINA" NEWSPAPER

Useful Lists.

Useful Information.

THIS PART of the present work is devoted to various lists of importance not only to the export manager in his office, but also to representatives in the Island of Cuba, as well as to those who travel in the Island for business or for pleasure. Only by a careful study, and by actual use, can the importance of these lists be appreciated, and it is with a great deal of pride that we submit these lists in the compilation of which we have spared neither cost nor effort. The value of these lists in itself should amply repay the possessor of this book for the small price of the whole volume.

The lists are classified by provinces as well as by cities and include alphabetical lists of post and telegraph offices, numbers of inhabitants of the more important cities and towns, banks and bankers, notaries public and lawyers, hotels and restaurants, customs traders, ship consignees, newspapers, drug stores and druggists, hospitals and physicians, etc.

In this connection we wish to state that the publishers of this series of reference books are splendidly equipped for the purpose of furnishing other lists of a similar character, in the Island of Cuba, and the Latin-American countries, and are willing to cheerfully submit any of the foregoing to those interested.

Value of Foreign Coins and Currency.

THE following lists and the figures shown therein are based on the standard value of the coins and currencies of different countries, as compared with United States money. The rate of exchange on this or that country may vary from the standard value, depending like everything else, on supply and demand, the credit of a country, etc. These variations may be very considerable at times, and the exporter, should, in order to play safe, quote his prices in his own money, so that he will not run the risk of getting much less for his goods than he really sold them for. There is, of course, a certain advantage to the importer in having prices in his own money, and in countries with good credit and a fairly stable rate of exchange, it will often be found best by the American exporter to quote prices in the currency of that country. All this, however, is too complicated to treat in the present work, and we merely wish to state that such matters should always first be taken up with banking houses who have the experience and knowledge necessary to decide intelligently in such cases, in order to minimize the losses resulting from fluctuations in the rate of exchange.
