

11 July 1862, 1

Major General G. W. Smith.

GUSTAVUS WOODSON SMITH is a Kentuckian by birth, and bears the reputation of being one of the most accomplished Generals in the service of the Confederacy. He entered West Point in 1838, where he graduated with high honors. For many years he served in the Engineer Corps of the U. S. Army, and was breveted in 1848 for gallant and meritorious conduct in the battle of Cerro Gordo, and again in 1849, for gallant and meritorious conduct in the battles of Contreras and Churubusco. In November, 1849, he resigned his commission in the army, and devoted himself to Civil Engineering. At the opening of the present war he relinquished a lucrative position, which he held under the Municipal Government of New York city, and offered his sword to the South. He now holds the rank of Major General.

During the preliminary operations of the campaign on the Chickahominy, General SMITH was second in command of our Army of Richmond; but he was prostrated, just previous to the battle of the Seven Pines, by a severe paralytic stroke, and the supreme command of the army, when General JOHNSON was borne wounded from the field, devolved upon General LONGSTREET. The sickness of General SMITH rendered him, for a few weeks, unfit for active service; but he is now, we hear, almost entirely recovered.

18 December 1862, 2

The Battle at Goldsboro'.—Authentic information received in this city yesterday stated that the enemy had been driven back from Goldsboro' across Neuse Bridge, and that our forces there were fully able to handle any force that the Abolitionists could send against them. Gen. GUSTAVUS W. SMITH was in command, and everything was working well. The damage to the track below Goldsboro' will be quickly repaired. The Yankees, it is thought, have retreated to their gunboats.

The Charleston Mercury.

6 January 1863, 2

A BATTLE FLAG FROM BALTIMORE.—Major General G. W. SMITH was, a few days ago, presented by a lady of Baltimore with a most beautiful silk battle flag. It would not be safe for us to mention the name of the lady presenting it.

The Charleston Courier.

28 February 1863, 1

The resignation of Major General G. W. Smith, of the C. S. Army, has been accepted by the President.

24 March 1863, 2

Major-General G. W. SMITH has arrived in the city, and is stopping at the Mills House.

The Charleston Courier.

8 April 1863, 2

The following officers are at the Mills House: Gen. GUSTAVUS W. SMITH, Gen. JAMES JONES, Gen. D. P. SIMMONS, Gen. B. HUGH and Members of his Staff, Gen. W. H. T. WALKER and staff.

The Charleston Courier.

23 May 1863, 1

Gen. GUSTAVUS W. SMITH has accepted the Presidency of the Etowah Iron Works, at Rome, Ga. While regretting that his military abilities and qualifications are lost to the service, we must congratulate the Confederacy and the friends of Southern enterprise on his occupation of a post for which he is eminently fitted, and in which he can do great service.

The Charleston Mercury.

27 May 1863, 2

PERSONAL.—General GUSTAVUS W. SMITH and
Lady are in the city, stopping at the Mills House.

The Charleston Courier.

27 May 1863, 1

General GUSTAVUS W. SMITH is stopping at the Mills
House.

25 May 1864, 1

THE ETOWAH IRON WORKS.—We are pleased to be able to announce that all the Government property, machinery, stores, supplies and hands of this important establishment, has been brought off safely. Notice of immediate danger, as a consequence of our army falling South of the Etowah, was only received at midnight Thursday night, but through the exertions of the President of the Company, Gen. G. W. Smith, who personally superintended the labor everything moveable was loaded up. The machinery, etc., come through by rail, and the negroes—some two hundred and fifty in number—with the stores, etc., by wagon trains, under the guidance of Gen. S. These facts we gather from his lady, who came through on horseback, reaching the city at dusk last evening. —Atlanta Appeal.

The Charleston Courier.

9 June 1864, 1

General GUSTAVUS W. SMITH has been elected to command the Georgia State Reserves, and has received a flattering order of approval and tender co-operation from Adjutant-General WAYNE, of Georgia, who was destined to become a candidate. Gen. MANSFIELD LOVELL is in Gen. JOHNSON'S army as a volunteer.

24 July 1863, 1

The Right Man in the Right Place.—The Governor of Georgia has procured the services of General GUSTAVUS W. SMITH, late of the Confederate army, to assist him and Gen. WARNE in fortifying several very important points in the State against the raids of the enemy. General SMITH is said to be one of the best engineer officers in the Southern Confederacy; has had more than twenty years experience in military affairs.