By Devon Francis (Associated Press)

A British military official is going to try to prove that the American story is figurative and not factual. The relative fight between the two countries is far from over, and both sides feel entitled to display their own aircraft. The two sides have the added advantage of the use of their own aircraft, which is not the case of any other country. The British, however, have the advantage of the use of their own Aircraft. The American officials have traveled to the British base to study their planes and their planes have been delivered to the British base for study and evaluation. The British have been asked to come to the American base for study and evaluation.
