Our Foreign News.

Our columns are so exclusively occupied this morning with the details of the interesting and important intelligence which reaches us from Europe and Nicaragua, that we must defer The main feature of the foreign news is the defeat of the Ministry upon the China question. The majority against it was decided, though not large, and it undoubtedly reprasents the feeling of the country. But it was not generally believed that it would lead to a resignation of the Ministry, or produce any marked effect upon the politics of the day. Lord l'Almerston is so strong on the general merits of his Administration, and it would be found so very difficult to organize a compact and satisfactory Government from the ranks of the Opposition, that the China question will probably be considered an incidental issue, not affecting the stability of the Administration. The vote will undoubtedly lead to a change of policy in regard to China. The news from Nicaragua, which is given in great detail in our columns, is interesting rather than important. Col. Lockridge has not been able, as yet, to force his way up the river, or to make any progress towards reinforcing Gen. WALKER. But he has been thwarted quite as much by the stupidity (not to say the cowardice and treachery) of Col. TITUS, as by any efforts of the opposing Allies. WALKER's position is unchanged; it is stated that he has been attacked by the Allies, but without success. The worst feature of the news, for the friends of WALKER, is the loss of time in relieving him, since his own force is diminished by delay, and rapidity of move-ment is of the greatest importance for him and his cause. He will still, however, hold out for some time. Whatever else he may lose, he preserves his own indomitable courage and tenacity of purpose.
