

---

WARREN D. WILKES, in a card to the True Carolinian, assigns as his reason for leaving Kansas that he had worn down his health in the services he had rendered the Southern cause, and the preservation of his health was an imperative duty. He says his books of account, connected with his collections, and vouchers connected with disbursements, are open to the inspection of the public.

---