

Misfortunes, they say, never come single; and in the case of Mr. George W. Clark, late an Indian Agent in Kansas, and credited by fame with the murder of Barber during the first siege of Lawrence, this saying seems to come true. We noticed a little while ago that, in spite of his eminent services to the cause of Border-Ruffianism, the President had removed him from his Indian Agency. It appears by the advertising columns of a late number of The Leocompton Union that he has not merely lost his office, but what perhaps comes still nearer home to him, "his negro woman Judy," "good cook, washerwoman, and excellent house-servant." As, possibly, Judy may apply for employment somewhere within the range of our circulation, we give her the benefit of the excellent character from her late master contained in the subjoined advertisement:

"FIFTY DOLLARS REWARD.—Left my premises, near Leocompton, K. T., on Tuesday, the 17th day of November last, my negro woman JUDY. She is about 35 years old, 5 feet 3 or 4 inches high, and corpulent, weighing about 225 pounds. She is very black, with several teeth out in front, and speaks intelligently and plausibly. She has been seen at several houses in the neighborhood, and when last seen was traveling toward Lawrence. She is a good Cook and Washerwoman, and in other respects an excellent House-Servant. She is no doubt lurking in or about Lawrence, if she has not already secured a passage on the underground railway to Chicago.

"I will give $25 for information that will lead to her apprehension, or $50 to any person who will deliver her at my residence.

GEO. W. CLARKE.

"December 2, 1856.—n27-54."

Whatever may be the views of Mr. George W. Clarke on the Kansas question, it would seem that at least one member of his family or of his late family is bent upon making that Territory a Free State. But though he loses in one direction he may gain in another. This double loss of his office and his Judy ought to go far to secure him the clerkship of the Bogus Kansas Legislature now shortly about to meet—a berth for which we see he is an applicant.
