

FROM KANSAS.—In the language of the late Col. J. M. Goodhue, "we had the pleasure yesterday of taking by the hand Hon. John A. Wakefield, author of the Black Hawk War and an Unpublished Novel of thrilling interest." He is Treasurer of the State of Kansas; has the treasury in his pocket, and is supposed to be here on a flying visit to the Republicans. They will probably organize, and, armed with Sharpe's rifles, proceed to Kansas under command of Lieut. General Newson, who is expected home from the east forthwith, whither he has been for some time past making extensive preparations.

-- At a Democratic meeting, held on Saturday night, at the Court House, Capt. Wakefield had an opportunity of spreading himself under the auspices of "Uncle Sol" of the Free Press, McGrorty, and others of that ilk. The gallant Captain was particularly severe upon President PIERCE, and on Democrats generally.
