

CUBA.

HAVANA, February 8.—A band of insurgents, number unknown, has made its appearance at the town of Camarones, on the line of the railroad between Cienfuegos and Villa Clara. A detachment of troops marched against them, and a panic prevails in Cienfuegos. Many families fled from the town, fearing the insurrection will spread to that district, and have arrived in this city. Fort Cabanas, which guards the place, is garrisoned only by a battalion of volunteers, and a force of regulars have been dispatched to re-enforce them.

The Diario in its account of the outbreak at Camarones says the first act of the rebels was to destroy a section of railroad between Cienfuegos and Villa Clara. The same paper acknowledges that the situation in this district is grave. Much excitement has been created in Havana by versions more or less exaggerated, of events in the Central Department. The approach of the revolution to the vicinity of Cienfuegos, which is the center of a large planting district, is expected to cause a rise in the sugar market. Several attempts at revolution have been made at Unella Avajo and in that region, and the 1st and 5th battalions of volunteers are under orders to proceed to that point to prevent a renewal of disorders.

Strangers continue to arrive at various points of the coast, it is supposed, with the intention of joining the revolutionists. Many have been arrested on suspicion.

The government has chartered several steamers, and is preparing some men-of-war and light draft steam launches to command the Keys and prevent the disembarkment of expeditions from Nassau, and when that is accomplished the flotilla will proceed to attack the earthworks which the insurgents lately erected at La Guarja.

The rebels recently assembled at Manauma to the number of 300; were attacked by the troops, and according to the official report, defeated, losing all their arms and ammunition and eleven prisoners.

Sugar buoyant: No. 12, $8\frac{1}{2}$ @ $8\frac{3}{4}$ reals.