

ARRIVAL OF CAPTAIN GENERAL DULCE AT HAVANA.—It will be seen by a telegram in another part of the paper that the new Captain General of Cuba, General Dulce, had arrived at Havana. He was accompanied by Bishop Martinez, of Havana, who was banished to Spain a short time since by Lersund. His arrival was not marked by any of the demonstrations that were expected, and his installation to office was quiet and rather solemn. Neither Spaniards nor Cubans felt like making a fuss; indeed, it is evident that both they and he have serious work before them and no time for grand flourishes. We shall probably hear soon of conciliatory measures being adopted by General Dulce, and the return of the Bishop of Havana with him indicates such a course, but from present appearances the Cubans are not to be subdued in that way. They seem determined to have their independence. At all events General Dulce is not likely to have an easy time in his new office.
