

Mastering for Cuba—The Antilles Question at a Crisis—An American Volunteer Squad- ron at Sea.

The American movement in sympathetic aid of the Cuban revolution is in active progress. By special telegram from Fernandina, Fla., received last night, we learn that the expedition which left New York on the Alabama ran the forts in safety and arrived off the Florida coast. The Alabama was joined by the Lillian and Teaser, having sixteen hundred men, ten thousand rifles, five hundred sabres and twenty pieces of artillery on board. General Goicouria was in command. Generals Steadman and Magruder are embarking another expedition on a fourth vessel. The entire force will concentrate at a common rendezvous off the Cuban coast. The privateers Hornet and Cuba are also out, mounted with fifteen guns each. The military expedition will be accompanied by the naval force. The Hornet is to cruise off Cuba for Spanish merchantmen and troopships. Five thousand American volunteers for Cuba are still in depot along the Gulf coast of the United States. The Cuban question must consequently soon be brought to an issue so far as the government in Washington and the American people are concerned.
