A Suspicious Steamer—Supposed Landing of Arms—Fighting at Mogote.

SANTIAGO DE CUBA, Dec. 8, }
VIA HAVANA, Dec. 13, 1862. }

On the 3d inst. a steamer arrived at this port and reported having seen a suspicious steamer, flying the Haytian colors, anchored off the mouth of the B'cana river, a small stream situated between Manzanillo and Cape Cruz. A Spanish war vessel was immediately despatched to the locality, and on the evening of the following day (4th) she returned, having in tow the Haytian steamer Mary Anne, in whose hold there is a vacant space, which the captain reports was caused by his throwing part of the cargo overboard in a storm, which also damaged the machinery of the vessel. He attempted to make Santiago, and, failing, was compelled to anchor off the mouth of the river. The Mary Anne has a cargo of logwood on board. She is still detained, as the authorities believe that she landed a supply of arms for the insurgents.

Seven hundred men of the Valmaseda battalion have arrived here.

Fighting at Mogote still continues, and some of the Spanish wounded are coming in.

The cholera is decreasing.
