Enthusiasm in Havana—The Cuban Flag
Trampled.

HAVANA, April 6, 1869.

The government here have been made aware from Washington that two expeditions, conveying aid and comfort to the insurgent Cubans, have left the Mississippi river. Admiral Hoff has received instructions to prevent their landing, and also to watch the course of the two Peruvian monitors now near the coast of Cuba. The Spanish war steamer which brought in the steamer Comanditario as a prize brought also as prisoners five persons who were found on board of her. They are now being tried by a naval court martial, held on board the war steamer Blasco de Garay, and, if convicted, will be hanged or shot immediately.

Six hundred artillerymen have returned from Olenfuegos. The volunteers welcomed them in procession on their arrival, during which the flag of free Cuba was dragged and trampled upon amid great enthusiasm.

The committee of Matanzas volunteers have returned to that city expressing great confidence and satisfaction in the policy of General Dulce.
