

BOSN.—It is reported from Europe that Spain has appealed to the great Powers, her neighbors, on the subject of the despatch sent by Minister Sickles regarding Cuba, and that the Powers have returned answers "favorable to the rights of Spain." Will the monarchies of France, Austria and England, that hardly dare venture war between themselves for their own rights, venture a contest with this republic for the rights of Spain? Nonsense. The only advice Spain has received from her neighbors is the advice from England to give up Cuba. "Sell," says John Bull; "get something, for all will soon be gone." Austria has no more princes to spare, with poor Max gone. As for France, her Mexican bonds are not yet paid.
