

Col. Doubleday.

The Leader of yesterday, has an article in regard to Colonel DOUBLEDAY, of the Second O. I. Cavalry, returning fugitives to disloyal owners, gathering the facts in regard to the matter from a letter written by an officer of the regiment. It may be true that the Colonel is not doing just right, but a letter lying before us, also written by an officer of the regiment, contains the following sentence which rather goes to show that the officers of the regiment are not so "intensely indignant" as they might be:—
"We like our Colonel, first rate, much better than we expected."
