keeping. Thank God, these ages are long past. Religious freedom is extending over the world, and in its wake civil liberty. Science and Christianity, which at one time were supposed to be enemies, now go hand in hand in the great work of progression and restoration. Man's efforts are becoming gigantic in every department, compared with what they used to be. Not only as in Eden do the beasts of the earth bow submissive to his will, but steam and lightning are his servants—do his bidding—and carry his messages with the rapidity of thought. Even old mother earth, so long cursed, under new and improved systems of Agriculture, is sending forth fruits and flowers where used to be thistles and thorns. Mountains are scaled—cut down, or cut through—if they stand in the way of man's progress. The ends of the world are brought together, and the nations of the earth have social intercourse in Glass Palaces. Education is no longer locked up, to be used only by the favored few who hold the golden key, but is becoming as free as God's air. Christianity, and with it civilization, liberty, and improvement, are extending over the world, and will continue to extend, on and on, until mankind shall be free, happy, and good—until the earth is restored, and (in the eloquent words of Bascom,) "Eden be revived on every barren heath."
